Honorable Hiram W. Johnson,
Governor of the State of California,
Sacramento, California.

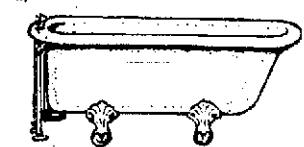

Dear Sir:—The Irrigation District Association of California, comprising in membership all irrigation districts now existing in the state, does hereby in regular meeting assembled at the City of Modesto, on this 27th day of October, 1911, respectfully request you to call a special session of the State Legislature of 1911-12 that the State Legislature of 1911-12 do enact Chapter 12

YOU'RE AN EASY PREY, with your flesh reduced below a healthy standard, for Consumption and other Scrofulous and dangerous diseases. And it's for just this condition that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is especially valuable. If you're thinner than you ought to be, whether from wasting disease, defective nutrition, or whatever causes, the "Discovery" will surely bring you up to the healthy standard. It's restoring the normal action of the damaged organs and functions. It causes every natural source and means of nourishment. As a strength-renewer and flesh builder, nothing like this medicine is known to medical science. Fully cod liver oil and all its disguised compounds can't compare with it. Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" is the original liver pills, first put up 40 years ago. The ingredients are vegetable, stomachic, liver and invigorating, and never equalled. Sugar-coated and easy to take as candy.

of the laws of 1911-12, known as the Irrigation Bond Act, which act was passed by the Legislature of 1911-12, and which had theretofore existed and placed such bonds in the position they should rightfully occupy.

One of the provisions of the act provided that such bonds should be placed in the same category as other municipal bonds as investments by banks and banking institutions. The Superintendent of Banks has decided that in his opinion the time of the act is not sufficient to permit the banks to place such bonds in their portfolios, and he has refused to permit savings banks to hold bonds in accordance with the provision of said act and before this can be accomplished it will be necessary that immediate legislation be enacted.

We believe that this is a matter of great importance and the failure to put this law into effect has already cost existing irrigation districts several hundred thousand dollars. On the strength of this legislation, some of the irrigation districts have already sold bonds to a large amount, but the further sale of bonds is prevented and such law can be made effective. The result is that the districts are compelled to pay interest on their bonds of bonds now outstanding, but are unable to pay the principal of their bonds so as to construct their systems, and where the interest on the outstanding bonds cannot be paid without selling the lands, the lands of the districts are being sold.

The Irrigation Districts Association of California, therefore, respectfully petition your Excellency to include among the subjects which you shall authorize the Legislature to consider at its special session, a bill to amend the act of 1911-12 so as to call that of legislation to irrigation districts and the securities thereof, and the sale, disposition and investment of irrigation bonds. Respectfully submitted,

THE IRRIGATION DISTRICTS ASSOCIATION OF CALIFORNIA,

FIGS WERE USED AS MEDICINE BY THE GREEKS
It has been said, and no doubt with truth, that the ancient Greeks used figs as a laxative to keep the body in perfect condition. They realized that no man could attain physical perfection who was troubled with constipation. However, it has remained for a San Francisco inventor to combine them in such a shape with other ingredients as to make a confection that tastes like Fig Candy—that if eaten at night like candy, will give a gentle movement of the bowels in the morning.

Thousands of people are writing for samples to the Phigandy Co., 654 Mission Street, San Francisco, and they will gladly send you a free sample on receipt of your name and address.

Phigandy is sold by all druggists at 25 cents per box—what is more, they are guaranteed to do the work or money refunded.

Why I Can Sell For Less
There is a good reason why I can sell for less. When you hear a merchant say that his prices are lowest you want to know why. This is why I can—I do not have the high mental that ground floor stores have. Isn't it worth several dollars to you to come up stairs to buy your suit?

Installments
I am selling suits on installments. It is an opportunity for you to have a well dressed suit and in town and pay low prices for your suit, besides the payments are so small that you hardly notice them. Come in and see these suits before you buy. You will be surprised at the saving you can make.

Fare Between Fresno and Los Angeles Will Be $3.30, Same as on Espee.

The new tariff schedule on the Santa Fe will become effective on December 1st, according to an announcement made here yesterday by officials of that road. The adoption of a new tariff list means that there will be reduction in passenger rates. For instance, the fare between Fresno and Los Angeles will be reduced to $3.30, the same rate as on the Southern Pacific. There will also be a reduction between San Joaquin Valley points.

On the same date a daily train will be put on between San Francisco and Los Angeles. This will be a fast train and will cover the distance both ways daily.

ARMY AND NAVY TO BE REPRESENTED LOCALLY
Separate Offices Established; Sergeant Nale Gets Six for Navy.

PRESIDENT RIPLEY OF SANTA FE NOT COMING
Will Spend the Winter at Santa Barbara; Report Started at Visalia.

3:30-4:30. Older Boys' Meeting (Association Building). Address, General. 4:30-5:30. Younger Boys' Meeting (Association Building). Address, D. W. Weist.

All sessions of the conference will be held in the Central M. E. Church, except where otherwise specified.

A fare and one-third rate has been secured for visitors at the conference, and complete arrangements have been made for the accommodation and entertainment of all delegates. Luncheon and supper will be served by some of the Stockton ladies and schoolboys will be provided at the places where the visitors are to be entertained.

A number of high schools in non-association towns have been asked to send delegates to the conference and all such visitors will be heartily welcomed.

Several Australian Association boys will be present at the Saturday morning services. Another special guest will be P. O. Leiser, the general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Canton, China, who is to speak at the Fresno association this afternoon.

ARMY AND NAVY TO BE REPRESENTED LOCALLY
Separate Offices Established; Sergeant Nale Gets Six for Navy.

In an effort to secure young men for the army and navy, the government authorities have established separate headquarters for the army and navy here. One for army recruits and the other for navy men. The army recruits are being received at 1023 I street.

Yesterday word was received from Mare Island that the duty recruiting office in the Marine Corps here had been made permanent. With Sergeant Harry Nale in charge, Sergeant Nale has been in Fresno since October 1 and during his first month has enlisted six recruits for the United States Marine Corps. Last spring, Sergeant Nale was stationed here and had good success. During the summer months he was transferred to Stockton, where he remained until ordered to return here. He believes the local field is excellent for obtaining new men for the navy.

At the army recruiting office, the men in charge are meeting with great success. The men in charge are: mechanics, clerks, sailors, cooks, bakers, tailors, shoemakers, tanners, carpenters, blacksmiths and pharmacists. By the first of the month the local offices will be equipped for making a thorough campaign of valley cities.

PRESIDENT RIPLEY OF SANTA FE NOT COMING
Will Spend the Winter at Santa Barbara; Report Started at Visalia.

The report that President Ripley of the Santa Fe is coming to California on a visit to all the cities along the route is erroneous, according to R. W. Hobart, commercial agent. Hobart declared yesterday that the report had its origin at Visalia, where it was given out that President Ripley would visit the valley cities before the end of the week.

According to Hobart, the truth of the matter is that Ripley is coming to California in his private car to spend the winter at his Santa Barbara home. This is an annual custom and has nothing to do with official visits along the route. Ripley is now on his way to Santa Barbara from Chicago, the headquarters of the Santa Fe. The report from Visalia led the people to believe that President Ripley was coming to Fresno about the first of the month.

Y. M. C. A. SPEAKER HAILS FROM CANTON
General Secretary F. O. Leiser Will Tell of Conditions in the Chinese Empire.

Mr. F. O. Leiser, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Canton, China, will speak to men at the local association building this afternoon at 4 o'clock, dealing with the social, economic, and religious conditions existing in China. Special music will be furnished by the Chinese Male Quartet.

Contact with leading business men, officials, and travelers of the Far East has given Mr. Leiser rare opportunity to become intimate with existing conditions in that portion of the world. He has used the privilege of this knowledge with discernment, and is able to present the facts and figures of the Chinese situation with ability and conviction.

Mr. Leiser graduated from the Baraboo high school in 1895, and received the degree of Bachelor of Letters from the University of Wisconsin in 1902. While in college he was a leader in Y. M. C. A. work, and after graduation served as secretary of the University Association, in which capacity he conducted a successful campaign for the present beautiful Association building at Canton, China, where he conducted a winter work that has made the Canton department a powerful link in the widespread system of Y. M. C. A. chapters.

The inadequate quarters of the Canton Association fairly swarmed with activities of a varied nature, and the membership has increased to such an extent that the need of a larger building is imperative. On a Saturday evening, in 1910, between the hours of seven and ten, 923 men made use of the association premises. In September of the same year, the average daily attendance was 424. The combined Bible classes enroll 177 men, and definite conversations are witnessed daily. The benefit of such an organization as the Y. M. C. A. in Canton is evident. With a population of 2,600,000 persons, it is the largest non-Christian city in the world.

Thomas Taylor, a well known Fresno man, who for years has been general foreman of the Southern Pacific round house in this city, died last night at his home at 1538 I street, after an illness that ended his long life at two years.

Taylor was only compelled to give up his position with the railroad company about a month ago. He was confined to his bed four days before his death. He was a native of England and 52 years of age.

Taylor came to Fresno about 15 years ago and accepted a position with the railroad company. He was gradually promoted until he was made foreman of the roundhouse. He was widely known in this section of the country and he was popular among the railroad employees. Taylor was a member of the Masonic lodge at Graton, West Virginia. He was also a member of the Fraternal Brotherhood in this city. No arrangements have yet been made for the funeral as the family are waiting word from a daughter.

Mrs. Taylor, wife of the deceased, is seriously ill at the family home, confined to her bed. She will probably not be able to attend the funeral services.

Besides his wife Taylor is survived by a son, a daughter, a sister and a brother. They are Charles Taylor of Fresno, Mrs. William Atherton of Detroit, Mich., Mrs. Lizzie Hendrick of Fresno and William Taylor of Sandusky, Ohio.

For the first week $141 is the amount deposited in the Fresno Postal Savings bank. This represents thirty-five accounts. The largest amount to be deposited at one time during the week was $100 and is credited to a well known Fresno man. Several depositors have reached the maximum amount for the month.

It is thought that larger amounts would have been deposited, but it is suggested that the limit of $100 to be deposited in the bank during a calendar month. Most of the depositors are men.

Frank Cardwell, who is in charge of the bank, stated yesterday afternoon that he was well pleased with his first week of banking and that he was under the impression that many new accounts would be opened during the coming week. Any one with one dollar can open an account with the Postal bank providing they are over ten years of age.

FRANCIS IS FOUND

After delirating, last night, the jury yesterday afternoon returned a verdict finding George A. Francis guilty of assault, an offense which carries punishment of three months imprisonment with a maximum fine of $500. The charge on which he was tried was an assault with a deadly weapon on his former brother-in-law, Ellisworth A. Smith, on the last Sunday in August at Wheatville. After the verdict, Francis announced himself ready to take his sentence then and there. Judge Austin wanted time until tomorrow, saying he wanted to reconcile in his own mind the verdict of guilty of assault with the proof of the exhibition of a pistol and the discharge of the weapon.

SANTA FE MAY SOON LET ROUNDHOUSE CONTRACT

James J. Murray Building
Beautiful Residence in K. B. H.

Thomas Dunn to Remodel
Front of His Building on J and Kern.

Bids have been received by the Santa Fe for the construction of its roundhouse at Calwa, but it is not yet known whether the contract has been let. The water well, drilled for the purpose of providing means for mixing concrete, has been completed, and everything is now in readiness for the beginning of work, as far as the water is concerned. Announcement of the letting of the contract is daily expected.

James J. Murray is building a $10,000 bungalow on Kearney Boulevard Heights, which is to be surrounded by an Italian garden. The residence will be one of the show places of Fresno. On the grounds there will be several fountains and a tennis court. All light and telephone wires will be under ground. The house will be fitted up in the most elegant style and will lack nothing that will add to comfort or beauty. Construction is partially completed. Mr. Murray has just completed the construction of a fine garage on the property. There are now practically thirteen bungalows completed in Kearney Boulevard Heights, and the most of them are occupied.

In Fairmont addition two houses are already completed and another is going up.

REMODEL DUNN BUILDING
Plans are now being prepared by Eugene Mathewson for remodeling the front of the Dunn building at the corner of J and Kern streets. The J street front will be torn out and replaced by plate glass and about fifty feet of the brick wall on the Kern street side will be torn out, also to be replaced by plate glass windows. The plans will be ready for the contractors on Monday. Construction will start as soon as the contract is let.

C. Stout is planning a $4000 residence on Calaveras avenue. The plans are now being drawn up.

TWO STORY CONCRETE BUILDING NOW BEING BUILT AT RIVERBANK

R. C. Callender Erecting $15,000 Structure; Basement and Ground Floor Now Completed; Property in Townsite in Much Demand.

One of the latest additions to the town of Riverbank on the Santa Fe is the Callender building, which is now in the course of construction at Santa Fe and Santa Fe streets. The owner of the building is R. C. Callender.

The structure is being constructed of reinforced concrete. The basement, eight feet in depth, and the first story of the building will be about 15,000. It will have a frontage of 100 feet on Second street and 50 feet on Santa Fe street. It will be fireproof and modern in every respect.

The first floor will be divided into three store rooms, while the second floor will be divided into twenty-two offices and suites. A. A. Simon of Modesto is the architect.

Mr. Callender owns a 500 acre ranch several miles southeast of Riverbank and is thoroughly familiar with the resources and possibilities of that section of the country. He is very optimistic about the future of Riverbank. Applications have already been received for store and office rooms in the building.

PROPERTY IN DEMAND.
That Riverbank property is now in much demand is made evident by the trading that is being done. J. E. Ramsey, one of the early purchasers in the townsite, sold his lot and building, which was being used as a barber shop and store, to L. E. Curtis, of Maine, on Saturday, October 21. Three days later, Curtis sold the property to Mr. Madin of Nevada City at a good profit. Robert Hunkley bought the barber shop outfit and supplies from Ramsey, who has purchased residence property and is planning to erect a number of cottages. There is much demand here now for cottages.

With the growth of the town, new business houses are springing up everywhere. The butcher shop being erected for L. E. Curtis is rapidly nearing completion and will be ready for occupancy in about a week.

H. Kirk Hadley, one of the pioneers of Riverbank, has opened a temporary news stand.

Honey E. Ross, postmaster and phone operator of Riverbank, is now delivering goods by automobile.

A corps of surveyors under A. J. Finney is plotting and subdividing acreage adjoining the townsite, which will be put on the market within a very short time by the City of Riverbank.

George J. Smith and family of Jonesdale arrived in Riverbank last week and already lumber is on the ground for a residence for them.

H. J. Shindler and family of Ceres are also here to remain. They are occupying a temporary dwelling on their property.

C. H. Ward, superintendent of the land and water company, is again waging war against the squirrels and is meeting good results in his extermination campaign.

ACTIVE TRADING IN CITY PROPERTY REPORTED

Many Sales Are Made During Week in Tracts in and Near Town.

New Subdivisions Extend Toward Sunnyside Country Club.

Trading in city property was the principal feature of the past week in real estate circles. A great deal of city property changed hands during the six days and many tracts reported that they had been sold. There was also a great deal of activity in tracts in and near the city.

Sanderson and Lenz reported yesterday that they had sold 25 lots in the new Calwa townsite. In the past week one of the purchasers was G. H. Heck of Fellows, who secured business property, upon which he expects to build.

The contract for the cement sidewalk and curbing in the townsite has been let to Thompson Bros. of this city and construction work will be started at once. A complete modern water system is also to be installed. Six inch water mains will be laid throughout the town.

One of the big sales of the week in country property was that of 100 acres of vineyard near Del Rey by J. H. Hopper and Max Hopper for $15,000. The land is planted to Thompson grapes. The Hoppers have moved into Fresno, although they resided on the ranch for many years. The names of the new purchasers have been withheld.

NEW TRACTS EAST
Announcement of the opening of the Sunnyside Country Club has created a great deal of interest in property east of the city and as a result a number of tracts are being subdivided and put on the market as suburban residence property.

The tract at the corner of Orange and Ventura avenues, which was put on the market by the H. H. Alexander Land Company, is known now as Kenmore Park. The tract was put on the market a week ago and was decided to call it Ventura Park but owing to the confusion arising over the fact that the Traction Company's property was known as Ventura Heights, it was decided to change the name. This property will be sold for exclusive residence property.

When the Sunnyside Club formally opens, it is expected that a portion of the Sunnyside vineyard, bordering on Ventura avenue, will be subdivided for suburban purposes.

KEARNEY HEIGHTS SALES.
The James J. Murray Company reported the sale of $5,000 worth of property in Kearney Boulevard Heights and $2,000 worth of property in Fairmont addition last week. It is said that quite a part of activity is now being manifested in these tracts because of the reported building of an electric railroad out of Fresno to Kern through this territory. The proposed route of the state highway along Kearney avenue is said also to have increased interest in this part of the city.

The James J. Murray Company also reported the sale of two 20 acre tracts and one 10 acre tract in the Kernman district last week. A great number of inquiries about this property are also being received from the East and the indications that the next few months will see a large influx of eastern colonists into the land of Kernman.

W. W. Lewis reported the sale last week of a house and two lots at 417 Abby street from E. P. Myers to A. E. Dickinson. He also reported the sale of a house and two lots on Lewis street from J. E. Carmichael to Duff Hartwell. His sales in country property included 100 acres in Fresno county from Samuel Dealing to R. M. Miller of Atlantic City, N. J.; 40 acres in Fresno county from Ben Morgan to C. H. Munroe and 5 acres in the Monterey area from D. Hartwell to J. E. Carmichael.

James Lasswell reported the sale of 12 lots on G street between Stanislaus and Calaveras streets and the sale of a house on Calaveras avenue.

NORTH PARK TERRACE
The Fresno Herald has been the means of opening another tract in the northern part of the city for residence property. Huber Bros. announced that they have subdivided the North Park terrace tract near the Normal school and will place it on the market within the present week. Local real estate dealers anticipated that when the school is built, all that territory immediately surrounding will have been built up.

The North Park terrace tract is situated between the normal school site and the main residence district. It was formerly a portion of Poppy Colony and the property of Wey and Madison.

The W. H. Carter Company reported the sale last week of two lots on Van Ness avenue for $1500. The sale of a quarter section in Stanislaus county for $500 was also reported, together with the sale of 30 acres five miles north of town for $4,000.

J. J. Dickinson of W. E. Bush & Company reported the sale of a house on Iowa avenue to Mrs. George W. Wilson for $2,000 and two lots in the 400 block on Calaveras avenue.

The organization of the Fresno realty exchange is looked upon with a great deal of interest by Fresno realty dealers and it is believed that this organization will serve to stimulate the local market. The papers will soon be entitled to by the secretary of state and as soon as a charter is issued, the exchange will start operation. The method by which the exchange will be operated has attracted the local real estate men and they are firm in the belief that it will be a success from the start. The committee that has been instrumental in making the movement a success is Robert D. Sibley and H. Jacobson.

There are several dealers yet out but it is believed it will only be a very short time before their names are added to the list of charter members. If the organization is a success, a total membership of 50 or over is anticipated before the first anniversary.

THE WILD BEES' INN.

Here's the tavern of the bees:
Here the butterflies, that swing
Velvet cloaks, and to the breeze
Whisper soft conspiracies.
Hedge their land, the Fairy King;
Here the hotspur horriests bring Every worn, and drink away
Heat and hurry of the day.

Here the merchant bet, his gold
On his thigh, falls fast asleep;
And the mailed knightly bold,
Like an errant knight of old,
Feeds and slumbers long and deep;
While the friar crickets keep Creaking low a drinking song,
Live an ave, all day long.

Here the baron blunderbore
Browns, grumbling in his cup
While his followers, lean of knee,
Dragonsflies, slip exaggeratedly.
And the grigs, his henchmen, sup;
Here the gnats come whining up;
Thieves that lay the tiny tans
Of the honeyed musk that runs.

Here the leveled wasp, that goes
On his swift highwayman way.
Seeks a moment of repose,
Drains his cup of wine of rose,
Shouts his dagger for the day;
And the moth, in doxy gray,
Like some Lady of the Gloom,
Slips into a perfumed room.

When the darkness cometh on,
Round the tavern, golden-green,
Pierces fit with torches war,
Looking if the guests be gone,
Linkboys of the Fairy Queen;
Lighting her who rides unseen,
To her chin sweet-pea brewer,
Where she rests a scented hour.

DISCLAIMS REFLECTION ON TELEPHONE GIRLS

Labor Editor Says Offending Expression in Editorial Unintentional.

Editor, Republican:—The Labor News and its editor have been called to task in your paper for an editorial which appeared in our issue of Oct. 21st. We enclose herewith a copy of an editorial which appears in this week's issue of our paper, and request that you give the same publicity to this as you did to the other. We believe that this publicity will set us right with your readers, thousands of whom never see our paper and would therefore never have an opportunity of correcting the erroneous impressions they may have formed concerning us and our policies.

F. J. LAMOTHE, Editor, Fresno Labor News

A WRONG IMPRESSION SET RIGHT

The last issue of this paper contained an editorial commenting upon a controversy between the local telephone company and the Fresno Tribune. In the course of this article we took occasion to criticize the policy of the telephone company of paying less than living wages to some of its female operatives, and in doing so made use of a phrase which has since been widely criticized. Had the interpretation that has been placed upon this phrase by our critics reflected the true state of our mind and properly expressed our idea, we would doubtless be deserving of all the abuse that has been heaped upon us. But such is not the case.

The readers of the Fresno Labor News have never heretofore had an opportunity of doubting that its policy was the honest advocacy of the cause of the worker. It has always championed the cause of labor and shattered many a lance in attempting to bring about better conditions for the masses, men and women who labor in shop and factory, in store and in office, in whatever capacity, have always had, and always will have, an active, loyal and energetic friend and ally in this paper. It has always striven to promote the welfare and advance the interests of the ranks of industrial workers, and will never knowingly do an injustice to the class whose cause it champions.

To be accused of attacking the virtue of the women workers of the telephone company is to be accused of an offense that was farthest from our thoughts, and the accusation came to us as a distinct surprise. The known policy of this paper should have protected us from such a charge, and just criticism to which we were subjected. We are willing to admit that the offending paragraph was loosely written.

ten, that it was ambiguous, but we deny unequivocally that it was intended to convey the meaning that has erroneously been attributed to it. We offer our sincere apology to those whose feelings have been hurt, or whose sensibilities have been offended by a misinterpretation of our meaning. We meant to condemn the telephone company for its policy of paying less than the recognized cost of board and lodging to some of its employees, and to show that this damnable policy, which is employed by many large corporations, is so heinous a crime that it shrouds to heaven for redress. We meant to defend the underpaid telephone employees from the greed and grinding down tactics of the telephone monopoly, which recognizes no ethics and no law.

No one has greater respect and admiration for womanly modesty and purity than the editor of this paper. No one is more eager to defend these admirable qualities from vilification than he. He knows that the young women who are employed in the telephone exchange and their families is a class represent our highest type of citizenship, and he is proud to be able to state this fact. That this is true, however, is not due to the policy of the telephone company but, on the contrary, is a splendid testimonial to the character and high standing ladies themselves. God bless them!

RECALL IS ASKED ON SPECIAL TAX

The Kingsburg high school district, with affiliated district schools in three counties, has given up for the present all hope of erecting a larger school building. A special tax to raise $5000 for this purpose was levied by Kings and Tulare counties, but Kings county with the smallest school and interest in the district declined to levy the tax and the result is that the full tax cannot be collected and there is no provision of the law for the suspension of the collection of the special use for any purpose of what money is collected—in short it would be just so much money to the credit of the district in the treasury withdrawn from general circulation. A solution of the problem, it is thought, has been arrived at. The district board and Fresno supervisors to have the special tax recalled and all payments ordered refunded. A day of reckoning is not far distant in the district because with the suspension of the collection of the way the next year will be called for a $5000 bond election. If favorable outcome is elected to be a foregone conclusion.

SOUND SERVICEABLE TEETH ASSURE A PEACEFUL STOMACH

"Good digestion waits on appetite, and good health on both," is an oft-quoted statement that expresses forcibly in a few words the importance of the stomach in the preservation of health. A peaceful stomach can be had only where conditions are created that insure good digestion. The mouth is the gateway to the stomach and it is in the mouth that the first preliminary measures must be taken by which good digestion is assured. Your teeth must be in good enough condition to chew and grind up the food thoroughly for delivery to the stomach. If your teeth are not in condition to handle your food properly, more or less disturbance in the stomach is almost a certainty until you have your teeth defects remedied. It is about our ability to PROPERLY CORRECT ALL TOOTH TROUBLES that we wish to specially talk to you. Little men in all line of human endeavor should do, we have worked to build up a good reputation—a reputation whereby our names would always be synonymous with good work. We feel that we have succeeded in this respect, and it is a matter of personal pride on our part that it is our hundreds of satisfied patients in this locality who vouch for the high character of our work. No dissatisfied patient ever leaves our offices, nor will your case be an exception if you come to us for dental work. WE WILL ALWAYS BE YOUR DENTISTS whenever in need of dentistry if you allow us to do work for you once. This is the confidence we have in our ability to execute your work in a lasting and satisfying manner. Our equipment is such that you can be assured of obtaining in our office and at our hands the best dental work that can be had anywhere at any price. This equipment includes not alone all modern methods of correcting tooth troubles, but it also includes a wide range of knowledge gleaned by an experience covering fifteen years, two-thirds of which has been here in Fresno. In seeking our services you can feel assured in advance that when our work for you is completed you will be equipped with sound, serviceable teeth that will enable you to chew your food as thoroughly as you desire, and you can learn in advance without charge to you what any needed work will cost you, for we will gladly examine your mouth at your convenience, and for such services we make no charge. Nor does it carry any obligation on your part to engage our services unless you are fully satisfied to do so. (That is our policy.)

DO IT NOW!

We know that you are going to exchange your piano which has stood silent these many years.

We also know that you do not wish to exchange it for an Automatic, but what you want to exchange it for is the genuine Autopiano, or a piano equipped with the Auto Pneumatic action, so that with the aid of it, you can produce without tedious practice and finger work, better music than the average professional pianist of your acquaintance. Should you invite a pianist to your home, he probably would want to play some of Beethoven's or Chopin's compositions, and perhaps that same evening you would be in the mood to enjoy some of the melodies, such as "Home, Sweet Home," "Swanee River," etc.

Now, what we want you to do is to come into our store and try these different instruments, and convince yourself that you are entirely independent of "some one who plays." For while you may not be a pianist, you can soon become a Player pianist and at will, reproduce compositions of the great masters, or render the old-time melodies, as fancy dictates.

Perhaps you have been delaying this matter because you felt to get a good piano, one that would produce such music as you would want, you would have to pay too much money for it. We want to say that we can sell you one style of Bungalow Player piano as low as $485. The scale in this piano is just as perfect as you will find in a piano costing double the amount. It is made of the very best of material throughout, genuine metal back, the best copper-wound bass strings, highest grade Austrian wool hammers, best grade of ivory keys and ebony sharps.

2019 MARIPOSA STREET, FRESNO.

P. S.—The Autopiano is a blessing to humanity. It should be in every home—I love to play it.—It is wonderful.

(Signed) LUISA TETRAZZINI.

The Autopiano is the height of ingenuity. By your system of accenting the melody, one is led to imagine hearing the velvety touch of Paderewski.

Prominent among the social affairs of the week will be the Chrysanthemum Fete to be given by the members of St. James' Guild of the Episcopal Church on Friday night at the Parlor Lecture Club hall. This is an annual event which is anticipated with great interest both by the members of the church and their friends. This year the arrangement is somewhat different, as the club house will be open in the afternoon from 2:30 until 5, during which the sale of the pretty fancy work and other articles of the bazaar will be held. A splendid opportunity will be given to the busy housewife to "conserve her time and efforts in the making of Thanksgiving" mince-meat and plum puddings, for the very toothsome array has already been prepared, and is "ripening" so that it will be in splendid flavor by the day of thanks. This is only one of several innovations which have been arranged for this year's sale.

In the evening, the "carnival of nations" will be held, and the program closely conforming with the idea. Lovely big nodding blossoms which give the fete its incentive and name will be again this year, should procure their season's tickets by the second Saturday in November, or, say the constitution. The entrance fee will have to be repaid.

Among the very interesting visitors which Fresno has the pleasure of entertaining, are Mr. and Mrs. William A. McCullough of Alhambra, N. J., who are guests of Mrs. J. McCallum and daughters. Mrs. McCullough is a literary light in the forefront of modern literature, whose twinkle has been seen through the telescope mediums of the popular magazines. Her journalistic name is Anne Willis McCullough, which is affixed to some beautiful bits of child verse published in the Metropolitan, St. Nicholas, Youth's Companion, and other magazines.

A few of her published works are "The Little Stories for Little People," which are entirely in verse, published by the American Book Company, and the "Chimes of Childhood," a book of songs in which Mrs. McCullough collaborated with an Eastern composer in getting up, put out by the Oliver Ditson Company of Boston.

William A. McCullough is an artist and illustrator, of no small merit, and he too, is at his best in child studies. Most of his work is in water colors, which is so dainty and delicately smooth looking that it often resembles pastel. A recent study of his illustrated poem of Mrs. McCullough called "Oregon Trees" and was a portrayal of an attractive little maid of a half dozen or more summers, half reclining on the easy cushions of a window seat, gazing pensively down a long vista of tall straight trees, which in her child brain suggested the pipes of an organ. Another lovely study shows a most interesting little yellow haired tot, reveling in a field of wild flowers, while the background reveals the gable of some building peering out from a grove of trees.

Probably his most popular studies are the child figures, showing a bit of landscape. A close rival in favoritism to any of the others is the figure of a sturdy little 3-year-old, with the light from long windows falling upon his blond head, as he sits upon a low stool utterly oblivious to all else in the lingering of a wonderful picture book. Mr. McCullough is quite different in his style from any of the other artists who have exhibited pictures in Fresno. William Adams, the Scottish artist of Pacific Grove, who does both oils and water colors, or Miss Frances Gearhart of Los Angeles, who is a devotee of the scrub method in water colors. It is very possible that an exhibition will be made soon of some of Mr. McCullough's paintings.

Much local interest is being displayed in the approaching marriage of Miss Ruth Norris to Eugene Thompson. Miss Norris is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Norris, and spent her childhood in Vallejo, where the wedding is to take place, although at present the family residence is in Berkeley. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Thompson of this city. The wedding date has been set for November 24th, and will be celebrated at the home of the bride's godfather, J. D. English of Vallejo. Miss Marie English is to be the maid of honor, and the several bridesmaids will be Misses Agnes Pennycook, Jessie Holliday and Carol Green. Little Miss Wilfred McKay will assume the responsibilities of ring bearer. The groom will be supported by his brother, Claude Thompson.

After a delightful honeymoon, the young couple will return to Fresno, where they will reside. Mr. Thompson being associated in business as the younger member of the firm of Thompson & Irwin. Miss Norris is extremely popular in Fresno, where her frequent visits have endeared her to a wide circle of friends.

The board of directors of the Fresno Relief Society met yesterday morning with Mrs. Frank Warner and besides the routine business, discussed an interesting scheme for making up Christmas boxes to give, particularly to the children of the families to which the society has been of assistance. As Christmas comes on Monday, it will be probable that the boxes will be distributed on Christmas Eve.

St. James' Guild of the Episcopal church will meet on Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. H. C. Trapper, at her home, 1045 E street. The entire society is expected to be present, as this is the last meeting before the Chrysanthemum Fete.

A pretty though simple marriage will be solemnized on Monday morning at the parsonage of the First Presbyterian church, which Miss Elizabeth M. Wells will become the bride of William K. Kendrick of Fowler. The appointments are quite simple, there being no attendants. Only a few close friends will witness the ceremony. Miss Wells will be attired in a prettily tailored suit of blue, with which she will wear a harmonizing felt hat with French green trimmings. They will leave shortly after the wedding for the south, where they will spend their honeymoon.

Mrs. Everett Parsons, Jr., has returned from a several weeks' visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Shaw, in Hollister.

Theodore J. Irwin, the pianist, gave a novel musical lecture yesterday afternoon at his studio on E street, telling in the minutest detail of the formation of the Beethoven symphony "Eroica." A series of charts were used in illustration, and the lecture was a sort of glimpse behind the scenes, as it were. The first theme was touched over to the next one, and so on, until the entire symphony was built, so to speak. Mr. Irwin played the symphony as a further illustration. About twenty ladies enjoyed the afternoon. They were Mrs. W. D. Critchton, Mrs. H. Z. Austin, Mrs. A. B. Smith, Mrs. and Miss Nason, Mrs. H. Allen, Miss Frances Dean, Miss Lucy Hatch, Mrs. Florence French, Mrs. S. L. Platt, Mrs. A. G. Wahlberg, Mrs. F. M. Miller, Miss Emma Douglas of Sanger, Miss Albert Pederson, Mrs. A. E. Sundblad, Miss Hazel Sunderland, Mrs. Montgomery Thmas, Mrs. Robert Lechard, Mrs. Lechard, Mrs. George Babcock.

One of the most delightful afternoons of bridge playing was that presided over yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Bert Larkin and Mrs. W. T. Burks in the down stairs of the Parlor Lecture Club house. Charming indeed were the decorations, the materials for which have been chosen from the deep shaded American Beauty roses, and also the long stemmed yellow chrysanthemums. Hunting baskets were artistically arranged in the hall, where the piano stool, and during the afternoon Mrs. Jessie Holmstrom gave some beautiful vocal numbers. Following the several rounds of bridge, a number of handsome prizes were awarded to those holding high score. Mrs. T. M. Hayden was lucky in receiving a lovely perfume bottle with the applied silver, and a handsome cut glass bowl was won by Mrs. J. R. Austin. A handsome cut glass sardinet bottle with silver top went to Mrs. Willis Weaver, and Mrs. Frank Wyatt won a dainty pair of silk stockings.

Among the many stunning gowns worn were those of the hostesses, Mrs. Burks wearing a beaded robe of Oriental colors over white, and Mrs. Larkin looking very handsome in a gown of embroidered black marquisette over a blue satin.

Mrs. Jessie Blasingame was stunning in an imported gown of black beaded velvet over purple messaline and wearing a jetted ornament in her hair. Mrs. Frank Holmstrom was among the handsomest in the assembly, being a richly simple design of black panne velvet made entrain. With it she wore

The punch bowl was provided over by Miss Nellie Stump in a becoming gown of black chiffon bordered with hand-painted roses in tones of lavender. Her hair dressing was enhanced with a bandeau of rhinestones. About forty guests enjoyed this delightful affair.

Although Halloween is still two days off, the entertainments during the past week have all been influenced by the approach of the "All Saints' Day" and with such an array of ornamentation, ranging from the clever little favors to the par-hatted at the shops to the lovely colored foliage in the rhinestones and yellow orchards and vineyards, it is not to be wondered that the hostesses cannot resist them! "Spook parties" are quite the thing, and those of the churches which have not already entertained at one will probably before the week is out. Associations and societies are not the only ones to take advantage of the delightful entertainment opportunities, a number of house parties being planned. Among the largest of the season's festivities will be provided over on Tuesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. George P. Beveridge at Eggers' Vineyard, when the English and Scotch contingent will celebrate, along with a number of guests who will go out from town, to both for apples and do all the "stunts" which make Halloween an occasion to be remembered.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Anderson of Coalinga are guests at a jolly affair for a few days, and another popular Coalinga couple who are spending the week-end at the Anita vineyard as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hector Barnes are Mr. and Mrs. David Heggie.

Miss Geneva Ellis of Alameda was the complimented guest at a jolly affair last night, given in her honor by her aunt, Mrs. M. E. Tilton, in the spacious rooms of The Palms. Everyone was requested to come in costume representing the kindergarten age, and much hilarious fun was provoked by some of the "getups." Halloween decorations lent color and vim to the affair, and at a late hour refreshments were served.

NOT ONE WOMAN IN 1000 HAS BEAUTIFUL HAIR

It is not entirely the fault of "rats," puffs and switches. It is because, in the rush of modern life, the average woman does not devote sufficient time to hair culture.

Just try this simple method:

Brush your hair 5 minutes night and morning. Then apply a few drops of

ED. PINAUD'S HAIR TONIC

(EAU DE QUININE)

Then massage it into the scalp with the finger tips for 5 minutes.

At night braid the hair loosely or let it flow without binding. Do this for one month. You will wonder why you didn't do it long ago, when you see the results.

Ask your dealer for a 50c bottle. Say "I want ED. PINAUD'S original Eau de Quinine." Don't accept imitations.

LEGISLATURE WILL TAKE UP WATER MEASURE

Governor Agrees to Provide for This in Call for Special Session.

H. H. Welsh May Draw Up Act to Force Regulation of Well Drilling.

The special session of the legislature will consider an act to regulate oil well drilling in California. The purpose of this act will be to force all operators to properly shut off the water in the wells.

At the request of the oil men, Governor Johnson has agreed to call the legislature into special session to consider this water measure in his call for the legislature, which will be issued early next week.

H. H. Welsh, former oil well commissioner, was in conference with Governor Johnson on Friday relative to a bill to be drawn up as soon as possible.

To the governor in making the taking of the water question, the oil men presented evidence to show the necessity for a law that will allow oil well commissioners full power to take action to wells where the water has not been properly shut off.

This includes abandoned wells, such as the Burr Bros. wells in Coalinga, which are now flooding the oil sands of the various fields, to their detriment and possible ruin. It is also desired that the oil well commissioners be given power to compel operators to shut off water at depths that will not endanger neighboring territory.

NEEDED IN KERN
Drastic action to take care of the water is needed more in Kern county than in any other of the oil fields of the state. Oil men on the west side of Kern county say that unless more effective measures are taken in the future, it will be but a matter of time before the water problem will be as acute as it is now in the Sunset and Midway fields.

The large amount of drilling done in the fields in the past two years has resulted in a great deal of water work in the portions of the field gas pressure has complicated drilling operations with the result that the water sands have not been properly shut off. In the district around Lakeview and further out on the Maricopa flat this has been the case.

One of the latest wells drilled, the Coronation, is showing water in the oil, and while this may be only water that was forced into the oil sands by the rotary pump, it is feared the cementing was not effective.

While the Coronation was undoubtedly taken care of in the case, many of the other operations fail to do so, with the result that the water enters the oil sand.

The Coronation committee that went to Sacramento was E. R. Walker, R. Baker and R. W. Baker. The latter's committee was W. R. Foster, T. H. Minor, T. M. Young, Angus Crites and a number of others.

The governor has advised them to have things in such shape that the consideration of the water measure will not cause any delay.

STANDARD TO INVADE TERRITORY FAR WEST

Land Is Three Miles Beyond Any Oil Well; Lease Is Secured.

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 28.—Within the next sixty days the Standard will begin drilling in the Kern River field fully three miles west of any well, and it will open up a wide territory should oil be discovered. The work will be begun on section 35 or 37, 23-27, under a lease made with the State Oil Company on September 28th. It is provided that drilling shall begin in three months, and thirty days have already passed since the signing of the lease. The royalty mentioned in one seventh, and this holds good whether oil or gas is discovered.

The territory is beyond the Standard and reservoir and part of the land described runs well back into the foothills. It is deep territory if oil is found at all, and the outcome of the operations will be awaited with much interest.

HUMAUMA CO. DECIDES TO SUSPEND DRILLING

McKITTRICK, Oct. 28.—The Humauuma Oil Company, whose lease is located in San Luis Obispo county, twenty miles in a southeasterly direction from McKittrick, has shut down the management deciding not to drill any further, for some time at least.

The well was cemented off in August, and work was resumed about the middle of September at a depth of 2033 feet.

Some days ago it was reported that light oil had been struck, but it has not been found in commercial quantities and it is now thought best to suspend operations temporarily. There is considerable Honolulu capital invested in the Humauuma company.

to the very great injury of large oil territory. Even in the old pumping district on the Twenty Five hill, much trouble is being experienced with water.

In the Coalinga field, such a law will not largely as a preventive of danger from water, but even there, considerable work is to be done. It is pointed out that even in this field, there are wells, which if allowed to continue running water into the oil strata, will eventually cause a large loss to adjoining property. Most of these wells were the result of conditions which can now only be remedied at an expense to other oil companies or to the state. The Burr Bros. operations here resulted in at least five water wells all of which are damaging neighboring property.

NO POWER NOW
The present law is of little value and allows the oil well commissioner practically no power. The work of the oil well commissioner now is purely advisory.

The committee that conferred with Governor Johnson pointed out that it is practically impossible to force an operator to properly shut off water in abandoned holes and there is no method of providing funds for the commissioner to do the work.

The Coalinga committee that went to Sacramento was E. R. Walker, R. Baker and R. W. Baker. The latter's committee was W. R. Foster, T. H. Minor, T. M. Young, Angus Crites and a number of others.

GROWTH OF PETROLEUM REFINING IN THE UNITED STATES SHOWN IN REPORT

Increase in Production of Fuel Oils Is 372 Per Cent—Total Crude Oil Used Nearly Doubles in Five Years

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 28. 1911.—A preliminary statement of the general results of the Thirteenth Census of establishments engaged in the refining of petroleum was issued today by Census Director Durand. It includes a summary comparing the general figures for 1904 and 1909 and a statement of the quantity of crude petroleum used; also the quantity of the principal products obtained therefrom. It was prepared under the direction of William M. Stewart, chief statistician for manufactures, Bureau of the Census. The figures are subject to such revision as may be necessary after a further examination of the original reports.

The word "establishment" as used in the Thirteenth Census is defined as meaning one or more factories, mills, or plants owned, controlled or operated by a person, partnership, or corporation, or other owner located in the same town or city and for which one set of books of accounts is kept.

The reports were taken for the calendar year ending December 31, 1909, wherever the system of bookkeeping permitted figures for that period to be secured. But in cases where the year of an establishment differed from the calendar year, a report of its operations was obtained for the fiscal period falling most largely within 1909.

RATES OF INCREASE
The summary shows increases in all the items at the census of 1909 as compared with that for 1904, except for average number of wage earners and their wages.

The capital invested increased 33 per cent; the gross value of products, 35 per cent; cost of materials, 43 per cent; value added by manufacture, 4 per cent; number of officials and clerks, 35 per cent; amount paid in salaries, 45 per cent; miscellaneous expenses, 78 per cent; primary horsepower, 56 per cent.

Establishments in 1909 and 1904, an increase of 45, or 29 per cent. The capital invested as reported in 1909 was $181,916,000, a gain of $45,035,000, or 33 per cent, over $136,881,000 in 1904. The average capital per establishment was approximately $1,819,160 in 1909 and $1,368,810 in 1904.

In this connection it should be stated that in the census schedule the inquiry concerning capital invested calls for the total amount both owned and borrowed and invested in the business, but does not include the value of real estate, property, plant, or equipment which was employed in the conduct of manufacturing enterprises. In the final bulletins and reports there will be separate statements of the rental paid for such property.

VALUE OF PRODUCTS
The value of products was $236,998,000 in 1909 and $175,005,000 in 1904, an increase of $61,993,000, or 35 per cent. The average value per establishment was approximately $1,819,160 in 1909 and $1,368,810 in 1904.

The value of products represents the product as actually turned out by the factories during the census year and does not necessarily have any relation to the amount of sales for that year.

COST OF MATERIALS USED
The cost of materials used was $189,273,000 in 1909, as against $139,387,000 in 1904, an increase of $50,886,000, or 36 per cent. The average cost of materials per establishment was approximately $1,892,730 in 1909 and $1,393,870 in 1904. In addition to the component materials which enter into the products of the establishment for the census year there are included fuel, power, and heat, and all supplies. The cost of materials used was $189,273,000 in 1909 and $139,387,000 in 1904.

LINDSAY

The Fraternal Brotherhood Friday night enjoyed a Halloween party at the home of Mrs. J. W. Lindsay. There were many interesting features including pumpkin carving, apple bobbing, pinning, string cutting, etc.

The "B" section of the young people's class of the Baptist church entertained the "A" section last night at the church. There were all sorts of games and other amusements and refreshments were served, all spending a most enjoyable time.

A surprise party was given at the home of Miss Ruth Walker to Miss Lulu Day and Miss Leta Van Sickle, the former young lady intending soon to leave for Southern California and the latter for Michigan. Many old time games were indulged in and sandwiches and coffee served.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Thines of Grant's Pass, Oregon, are visiting their daughter Mrs. A. P. Harth.

Mrs. C. C. Redmond of New Orleans is visiting at the H. E. Redmond home for a few days.

The Women of Wondercraft were entertained last Wednesday night at a Halloween party at the home of Mrs. L. L. Berry. The guests were dressed as ghosts and the decorations as well as the various amusements were all on the same order. Light refreshments were served and a most successful function was voted.

MADERA

Miss Pauline Stahl gave a very enjoyable Halloween social at her home Friday evening. The rooms were beautifully decorated with pumpkins, fashioned into jack-o'-lanterns, autumn leaves and other trimmings to enhance the spookiness of the scene. The laughter that resounded through the house, however, soon banished feelings of gloom and fear and the little joys held the boards until a late hour.

The guests were clad in all sorts of fancy and grotesque costumes and immediately entered upon the spirit of the occasion, indulging in the usual Halloween games. Hair raising stories were told but these did not detract from the pleasure of the evening nor dull the appetites of the guests when invited to an excellent collection spread by the happy hostess, who enjoyed the occasion as much as the little ones.

The young people of the Presbyterian church assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Moore last night and enjoyed a delightful Halloween social. The evening was pleasantly passed playing the usual Halloween games. There was also fortune telling by witches, and the usual spooky stunts that are appropriate to the time. The guests all had an excellent time. After a few hours of merriment, the guests partook of an excellent luncheon by the hostess.

TULARE

The Birthday Club, whose purpose is to have some sort of links every time a birthday of one of the members falls around, with occasional gatherings between times, met at the home of Mrs. H. A. Phillips Friday night to celebrate her anniversary. The ladies passed the evening in a variety of pastimes, and had a jolly time. Prizes were awarded in two of the features. One of them was formed cutting papers, followed by cutting papers, and in this Mrs. W. J. Higdon won the trophy. The other was a verse-carpentering contest, with Brooks' coming out the winner. The pathos of the contest was that Mrs. J. Young was voted the winner. Supper was served after the games. A "quackery" received from an absent member, Mrs. Gorham, was handed the club, and when opened it was found to contain choice confectionery of the striped kind. The members of the club present were: Mrs. F. E. Anderson, Mrs. C. W. Tompkins, Mrs. W. H. Jones, Mrs. J. E. Beck, Mrs. Emma Wilson, Mrs. Kate Montag and Mrs. H. A. Phillips. Invited guests were: Mrs. H. J. Young, Frank Severy, Mrs. Mae Whitaker, Mrs. W. J. Higdon, Mrs. Myrtle Stewart and Miss Alice Wright.

Mrs. Maud Topper entertained her music class yesterday afternoon. They spent the afternoon playing games on the lawn and with music. There were about thirty pupils present and all enjoyed a most pleasant time. A very pleasant surprise party was given Miss Grace Purdy Friday night by the Intermediate class of the Congregational church. The party was in honor of Miss Purdy's birthday, and she was presented with a very handsomely bound book. The evening was spent in playing games, light refreshments being served during the course of the evening. Everybody reported a very good time. Those present were: Buena Cobb, Bebel Purdy, Keith Huff, Helen Huff, Homer House, Donald Abercrombie, Robert Myers, Nellie Mathews, Margaret Storm, Joyce Cochran, Anna Cochran, Lyman Patterson, Howard Childs, Perry Purcell, Ray Purcell, Mark Stevens, Oris Huff, and Arthur Purcell.

COALINGA

Mrs. R. S. Haseltine and Mrs. Wm. Stranahan delightfully entertained the members of the Ladies Whist club and their husbands Friday evening in their homes on Monroe and Fresno streets. The Haseltine and Stranahan homes adjoin each other and as the guests arrived they were received at the Stranahan home, where their wraps were removed, and they then went to the Haseltine home, where the tables were arranged and whist was indulged in. There were about forty present and the fore part of the evening was spent at the card tables. After the final

The place cards were original reminiscences of Halloween done by the hostess. A huge cut glass bowl of yellow chrysanthemums and maldenhair fern decorated the table.

The club members are Mrs. A. L. Krebs, Mrs. M. M. Spoke, Mrs. Lambert Rowell, Mrs. Charles Maxwell, Mrs. E. Alexander, Mrs. N. P. Justy, Mrs. Tripp, Mrs. West, Mrs. Sherman, Mrs. R. Phillips, Mrs. R. Gullfoyle and Mrs. Shepherd. Mrs. Justy will be the next hostess.

Mrs. Krebs has as house guests Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Vahlburg of New York city, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sunkel of Alameda, and later in the week Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Merritt of Oakland will motor down for a short visit.

A very pleasant farewell party was given Friday night to Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Goss by a number of their friends upon their leaving Shaver to spend the winter in the valley. They will be much missed in Shaver.

Vesper services will be held as usual this afternoon at the Y. W. C. A., beginning a series of special student services which will be held the last of each month. Miss Florence Robinson, a teacher in the local high school, will talk on "First Things First."

Miss Jewell McCoy, the physical director, who has been expected to arrive in Fresno to take charge of the department here, will be unable to come, owing to illness in the family. Her arrangements are now being made for some one else to take charge of it.

The Junior department of the association enjoyed their Halloween frolic last evening in the association rooms, which were appropriately decorated in silhouetted cats, bats and other emblems of the season. Pumpkin pie was served during the jollification. On Tuesday evening the joint social of the Y. W. and the Y. M. will be held, beginning in the rooms of the Y. W. with a witches' dance, later the "spook" party progressing to the Y. M. building, where ghost songs, goblin tales and the chamber of horrors will induce shivers of delight, and later musical numbers and recitations will be given.

The art department of the American Woman's League will meet on Monday afternoon with Mrs. Ethel Aber, at half past 2 to begin their lessons in china painting.

The ladies of the Calvary Presbyterian church will meet with Mrs. Ed Hertwick on Tuesday afternoon at half past 2. It will be a business meeting to arrange for the coming Christmas bazaar.

gave was played the scores were counted up and the prizes were awarded to Mrs. R. W. Dallas and Loula Trumbull, members of the club, and to Miss Clara Mason and F. J. McCollum, who substituted.

The assembly then enjoyed several vocal selections rendered by Mrs. J. E. Guiberson and Mrs. Chester Narra-more. While the program was in progress the hostesses arranged the card tables in the Stranahan home and the guests repaired to that place where refreshments and light refreshments were served. The social affair adjourned before the social affair adjourned several of the gentlemen present were called upon to give recitations or stories, the party breaking up about 12:30. The affair was a grand success and too much praise cannot be given the genial hostess.

The fact that Col. John Jacob Astor has made a marriage settlement of only $5,000,000 on Miss Force is a sufficient answer to those skeptics who doubt if it was a genuine love match.—From the Kansas City Times.

calling themselves "Los Huelgaesantes" gave a social on Friday evening at the Baptist Mission on McKelvey avenue, for the organ fund, and as a result of the efforts they are now boasting nearly $400 in addition to the treasury. The affair was a sort of basket social, each basket of dainties being auctioned off to the highest bidder. Games were played and enjoyable numbers given on a program of merit. They were: Song by the audience; recitation, Ethel Carpenter; song, Esther and Mildred Harrah; mandolin solo, Alice Macdonald; Marian Story; reading, Catherine Avery; Halloween duet, Hazel Mack and Irene Poore.

The Baptist Young People's Society will give a Halloween party on Monday evening. No fixed program has been arranged, but an evening of informal jollity is promised, with games appropriate to the occasion, and refreshments.

The Friday Club held their meeting last week with Mrs. Denver Church and continued the study of Faust with Mrs. Miller. Next week Mrs. Allen Guzen will be the club's hostess at her home on Yosemite avenue, when the Nibelungenlied will be resumed.

The Parlor Lecture Club is to hold a regular business meeting on Thursday, the usual half hour of music preceding. The home department is still being congratulated over the success of the recent kindness party, so ably managed by Mrs. H. H. Alexander, chairman of the department, and her assistant, Mrs. J. A. Stebbins.

An interesting musical organization recently formed for professional work is the Clara Schumann Quartet, composed of Zoe N. Glasgow, soprano; Zoe N. Redden, mezzo-soprano; Julia H. Harris, contralto; Minnie B. Marshall, also, and Ruth M. Ford, pianist. All of the members are well known and prominent in all the musical circles. Their voices are splendidly together and blend beautifully. They are fortunate in securing two unusual voices, in their extremes, Miss Marshall's voice being deep with the richness of a pipe organ and Miss Glasgow being a lyric soprano with flute-like qualities.

The Associated was not able to take the full amount, however, and it was agreed to take 60,000 barrels before the first. NEW GROVES SHOW THRIFTY GROWTH

Much Development Work Being Done on New Thermal Tracts ---Easterners Quick to Buy

Developing water on B. L. Stoner tract. Stream from 6-inch pump developed from three 8-inch, 60-foot wells.

As the hardy miners of the early days picked their way through the hillsides of Fresno county and the eastern slopes grading, they more gradually yielded the precious substance there was finally a general movement into the valley. Whole towns, including Fresno picked up and moved down. The shrill cry of the railroad whistle called men from the silent hillsides and water applied to barren lands proved an alchemic producer of more golden stone than the hills yielded to the miner's pick. Nothing more impressive of patient waiting than the silent mountains, and they are again coming into their own. The most notable phenomenon in later industrial development is embodied in the phrase "Back to the Hills." The great amount of development work done in recent years in Fresno county has been in the hills. Their water supply has made the valley bloom; it is sending power down tiny copper wires to turn all the wheels of trade; the mountain water, transformed in power, is pumping water where it will not flow by ditch, actually overcoming the laws of gravitation. Now after the wealth-giving hills have given up their substance to the less respectful plains, they are now about to contest with the great valley in horticultural supremacy.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ISSUES STATEMENT CONCERNING CITRUS POSSIBILITIES OF COUNTY

The orange belt of the county at present is in the edge of the eastern foothills in the vicinity of Mt. Campbell and the Teha-E-Nim-Nee. This is because the cold air draws into the low land and the flat lands, exposing these delicate fruits to injury by frost. Besides the orange is shown about the son it grows in, and only does its best in certain areas of soil. The tree is vigorous and will grow in any good soil, but the fruit asks for color, flavor, firmness of fiber, size, thin skin and what not, and must find these in the soil element. In the above district, the soil is of red clay, highly charged with iron mixed with humus or vegetable matter, and is locally known as "day iron." Here the groves look about perfect and the fruit is as good as it looks. No frost invades this district, and destructive winds, and in short, a scale insects are known. The fruit ripens early, from two to four weeks in advance of that of Southern California. This is due to the dry air and shelter from the ocean, and is an advantage in marketing the crop. Immense profits have been made, and are still being made, on oranges, exceptional prices paying 50 per cent on a value of $1,000 an acre. The oranges begin to pay at 4 to 6 years of age. It is not easy to say when the tree comes to full bearing, as it is long lived and its production increases for a long time. The California orange tree grows to be very large. Unimproved land can be bought for from $10 to $500 an acre, a very low price as compared with land of similar quality in the South, where the lowest price is about $500 an acre. The return, year by year, the total output that can be counted on, may be fairly stated at from $100 to $250 an acre, but this is in the face of the fact that good groves have paid $500 an acre, $1,000 an acre, and more. But $2,000 a year from ten acres—$20,000 net—is good enough. And it is a play farming to water and cultivate ten acres of orange. The lemon is not extensively grown here, but well located, it is equally as successful and profitable as the orange. A grove of 250 acres in this vicinity, of which 50 acres are oranges, is a bonanza in the owner's hands. The grove's return will disburse half the farms of 250 acres in any of the great agricultural districts of the East, or the Middle West. An adjoining grove of 11 acres, 2 1/2 acres just now in bearing, has averaged a net return to its owner of $4,000 a year for the past six years. Oranges and lemons are destined to be grown extensively in the foothills of this county, as these sensitive fruits find ideal soil and climatic conditions. The price of land, the abundance of water and the excellent transportation facilities are such as to insure a very attractive income from an investment therein. No man grumbles about the summer heat, who takes citrus fruit, or other fruit for that matter, for fruit here is simply combined sunshine, heat transmitted into delicious juice. Capable men will find this a very inviting prospect.

the groves, but in older parts of the county, but rather concentrated in the San Joaquin Valley. Although not depending much on any other district, it is claimed by experts that there is more orange and tangerine to be had than to be had. Most of the groves are within a few miles of the railroad and in a few years, this district will be one of the show places of Fresno county.

Fresno foothills share, in probably a larger extent, the advantages for citrus development enjoyed in the San Joaquin Valley generally, earlier ripening and freedom from injurious pests and frosts, oranges here have an advantage of from four to six weeks over Southern California and Florida. The commercial advantage of reaching the early market is very great, giving San Joaquin valley fruit a market in which cost is not considered.

With a few notable exceptions the common fact of local indifference to home possibilities is strikingly evidenced in the citrus industry. Fully three-fourths of the buying and development is being done by people from the East and from Southern California. However, the same has been true of Porterville, Lindsay and other points in the San Joaquin valley where the orange and the lemon have been developed.

Wyle M. Giffen, in a letter to the Washoe Land Company, but not confining himself to that tract says, "However, I believe there is a great future for the citrus fruit industry along the foothills of Fresno County, and hereafter we have laid too little stress on our possibilities in that line." H. W. Holbert, general agent for the Santa Fe, says, "It is my belief that the Washoe Thermal tract, together with other acreage immediately adjacent, is one of the best citrus and other fruit propositions of which I know, particularly considering the price."

CENTREVILLE AREA. The oldest district in the county is the Centerville district. Here the citrus industry has for a number of years been in the fully developed commercial stage. Here there are something over 100 acres of oranges and lemons in bearing, a couple of hundred acres of young orchards and a great deal of nursery stock. There is one grove here some thirty years old, others 20 years and so on. The district is practically a no-man's land, for in all this time there has been no injury to either fruit or tree. Locusts and beetles were among the first to develop the orange industry here.

N. W. Moody is one of the best known of the growers in this district and is stated upon reliable authority that his grove nets from $10,000 to $12,000 annually.

Among other growers in this district are: P. Heim and Thomas grove—45 acres; Valencien, 20 acres; Walter G. Mudge grove—32 acres oranges, 1 acres lemons.

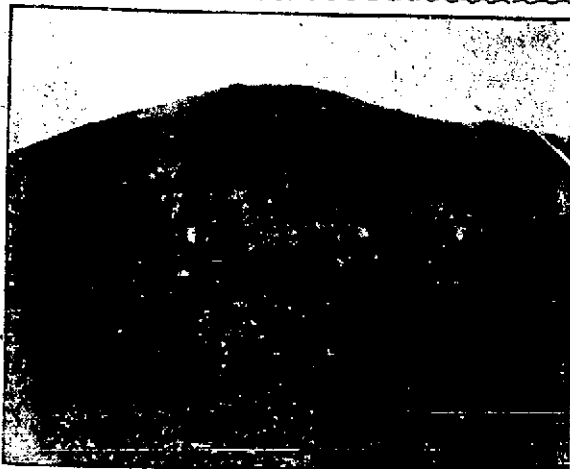

N. W. Moody's grove—17 lemons, 4 oranges. Annual lion grove—10 acres. The next oldest orange belt is the Mt. Campbell, developed largely through the efforts of W. N. Rohrer, who now has one of the finest groves in the county and a magnificent home in the midst of it.

MOUNT CAMPBELL TRACT. The Mount Campbell Orange Tract lies in the thermal belt, at the southern base of Mount Campbell, directly east of Fresno, six miles from the growing town of Reedley, and nine miles from Sanger, where the terminus of a lumber flume, where building material and box goods can be purchased to advantage. The location of this land seems to combine all the essential features for successful orange culture. It consists entirely of a level, more or less level, some forty to eighty feet higher than the foothills adjacent in Kings River bottom, thus being above the line of severe frost. Mount Campbell on the north rises to a height of 1000 feet, standing as a sentry, giving protection against the north winds. The location commands a fine view of the snow-crowned heights of the Sierras, as well as of the vast stretches of vineyards and orchards to the south and westward; and, notwithstanding the warm summer days, the nights are always cool and pleasant, as the cooler air from the mountains, depending at night, naturally exerts the warm air of the day, thus refreshing the air daily through the long summer. The location is beautiful and beautiful. Excellent drinking water is had at a depth of sixty to eighty feet, and the oak grove a few miles distant, furnish food.

The soil is deep and extremely fertile, being a deposit of the orange vegetation from Campbell Mountain for ages. It is rich in spongy when dry, hence it is usually known as "dry bog" soil. It must not, however, be confused with the above land, as the dry bog does not bulge, and will sink like lime when water is applied, or when exposed to the air. It is especially rich in potash, lime and oxide of iron, the latter giving not only color to the soil but color and weight to the fruit. In this soil, the orange ripens earlier than in red granite soil in the same locality—in fact, it is acknowledged by experts in orange culture that this red dry bog produces the most oranges known in the trade—thin rind, sweetness, fine texture and highly colored.

WASHOE DISTRICT. The Washoe Thermal tract is now being developed and already there are young groves here fully up to the best groves to be seen in the other districts. It lies between Mt. Campbell and Teha-E-Nim-Nee Mountains, between the two.

The Oxypathor Cures Rheumatism

Walter J. Vowels.

Dear Sir—I have been using the Oxypathor for two months for rheumatism. I had it in my feet and hands so bad I could hardly walk, and my hands were so badly swollen I could not dress myself, and were so painful I could not sleep at night or rest by day. I am now feeling quite well and my rheumatism is so nearly well that I can do my housework. The pain is all gone. I tried several doctors, and took every kind of medicine, but got no relief until I used the Oxypathor. I can surely recommend it to any one who has rheumatism.

Mr. Walter J. Vowels, 60 Duplex Oxypathor.

FRESNO, Cal., Oct. 18, 1911.

Two months ago we bought one of your Oxypathors for my daughter. She was very nervous at times, and would often have crying spells. The doctors said it was nervousness caused her trouble. But she is fine now since she has been using the Oxypathor. She has used it faithfully. She is looking fine and her color is good. I used it on myself to see if it would do my hearing any good. I have not been able to hear out of my left ear for 20 years. I have been using the Oxypathor every two weeks since we have had it. I am now able to hear a watch tick, and can hear any one talk to me over the telephone. I also was troubled with a roaring in my head; it would annoy me so much and make very nervous. That is almost gone, too. I don't have it all the time, as I did before I began to use the Oxypathor. I feel sure I will be able to hear as well as I ever did. This deafness was caused from fever. I must say I cannot praise the Oxypathor too much for what it has done for myself and daughter. I would not take any amount of money for it and go without one.

LEGAL PROBLEMS RAISED BY GIVING WOMEN BALLOT

Election Commissioner Assures Women They Will Not Have to Pay Poll Tax— Will Escape Jury Duty

SAN FRANCISCO—Many of the legal questions that have arisen in connection with the passage of the amendment to the State Constitution allowing the women to vote have been considered by Thomas V. Cator, President of the San Francisco Election Commission, in an interview given out here the other day. He is a recognized authority on election law, and the solutions which he has suggested to the many problems brought about by the making of the women at the polls are probably the ones adopted by the Legislature and made a part of the election laws of California.

AUTHORITY ON SUBJECT.

It is well to profess competence, Cator's statement with a few words regarding his position on the subject of women's rights. He was the first member of the New Jersey Legislature to gain permission for a woman to vote in 1880. He has been a body from the floor of the house. This was in 1886, and the suffragette was the late Phoebe Cary. Later Cator came to this city to make his home, and in 1891 and 1892 took an active part in the suffrage campaigns, winning the entire State in defense of the movement.

Immediately after the last fall has been counted in the outgoing precincts of the State the Secretary of State will begin his official canvass of the vote. He has forty days from Tuesday within which to give the result to the Governor and at the time the Governor is informed of the official result of the election the contents of amendment 4 will be written into the State Constitution automatically. The women of the State can register after January 1st, when the new registration begins in all counties, and they will be eligible to vote at the next election.

Perhaps the most important question before the women of the State is what must be done by the Legislature before they will be permitted to register. Commissioner Cator, who is the best informed man on matters pertaining to election law, has made the following statement in answer to a question inserted in order to cover the women.

Section 1027 deals with the question of naturalization and although we can not change the laws of Congress, we can amend our own political Code so as to bring the women under the regulations covering the men.

NATURALIZED BY MARRIAGE

"This particular section to the Political Code will have to be amended so as to permit the filing of statements of naturalization by marriage. With the passage of the woman's suffrage amendment, the Legislature will either naturalize or naturalized citizens are given a great advantage over our male alien residents. The women become citizens at the altar, while the men must wait the time of 21 years in order to vote or become naturalized. This provision does away entirely with the disadvantage of the women who have to wait 21 years in order to become citizens. Again there has arisen the question of whether or not the entire Political Code of the State will have to be changed to fit the new order of things brought about by the extension of the vote to women. The most surprising development of the discussion of this amendment is the discovery of a number of attorneys who are actually in the habit of practicing the Political Code will have to be amended in order to overcome the legal problems of the women. The amendment contained in Section 17 of the Political Code gives the attorney's fees for the preparation of the petition for the amendment. It is stated that wherever the word "he" is used it shall be read as meaning either "he" or "she" or both.

ESCAPE JURY DUTY

Last but by no means least important is the question of whether or not a woman shall be called upon to serve on a jury panel. That a woman who has the necessary physical and property qualifications is liable to be called upon to serve on a jury panel is a certainty, but experience has shown in States where women have been selected as jurors that their presence on a panel is undesirable, but not on account of any inability to do justice or assume the responsibility.

During the trials of civil law cases the presence of women on the jury has been found highly desirable by the attorneys on both sides, but criminal cases, where a disagreement involves the backing up of the panel overnight or perhaps for several nights, a possible juror's presence in the jury room subjects her and her companions to hardships that can, with justice to the cause and jurors, be prevented. All of these matters will be met and decided as we advance into the new era opened up to our women, and Commissioner Cator in speaking of these problems.

QUALIFIED FOR ALL POSITIONS

"Even as all of our women who are to vote are eligible to the positions and offices which are to be filled in the future very much in accordance with their vote desires, providing that they have the other necessary qualifications for occupancy of the position such as admittance to the bar in order to become judges, so will their position to the ballot box and attendant duties be a matter of qualification in the days to come."

Discussing the changes that will have to be made in the department of elections and in the apportionment of precincts throughout the State, Commissioner Cator said that the admission of the women to the electorate would necessitate the doubling of precincts throughout the State, making a total number of 600 to 700 precincts. The number of polling places in each precinct will also have to be substantially changed, and the number of voting booth clerks and judges increased by several thousand. As there are eight election officials assigned to each polling place, each receiving $10 a day, about 2,500 polling clerks and judges will be required at each election at a salary expense of about $55,000.

The manor of the Hall, which she called the "Secret Garden," is a charming model for the description of English country life in her latest novel "The Secret Garden."

The towns surrounding have flavor—some names—Pescadero, Saniliffe, Benenden. Through all the countryside are seen children in funny little red cloaks given them by Mrs. Burnett's neighbor, the Earl of Cranbrook. Though "The Secret Garden" is entirely modern in feeling, yet Mrs. Burnett simply could not help getting the proper atmosphere for this story of peaceful old garden days.

LONGEVITY IN NEW YORK

It's Really a Simple Matter to Live to Be a Hundred

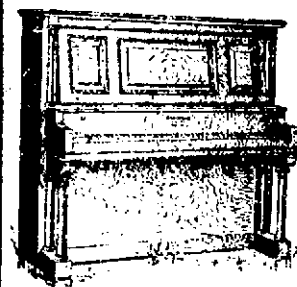

New York as a health resort, where, in spite of the roar of the "El" trains, the breath-taking rush of the underground and the rushing of the city, the other distractions of the metropolis, people still live beyond the century mark and die from old age, was the attractive picture suggested by a Clark Bell, the treasurer of the Methodist Society, at a meeting of that organization at the Waldorf.

From statistics furnished by William H. Gullity, at the registry of records, Mr. Bell compiled a list of persons who have died in the city within the last two years and a half at the age of 100 years or over. According to this list, 11 people died in New York in the year 1909 who had beaten the proverbial threescore years and ten by at least 20 years. The following year 23 centenarians died, while up to the present date of this year the names of only 5 persons have been received who were eligible to extreme old age honors.

The person who, according to Secretary Bell's report, had died after the longest life was Mrs. Esther Davis, who passed away on April 4, 1911, at the ripe age of 117. Mrs. Fanny Feldman was another who reached a remarkable age before succumbing to her infirmities. She was 112 years old at the time of her death. It was significant, however, that only one person among the whole list of 52 was a born and bred New Yorker. She was Mrs. Mary Griffin, who died last August at the age of 108. Most of the men and women on the list were natives of foreign countries.—New York Tribune.

Lowered Prices On Leather Goods
TO REDUCE STOCKDo You Know What Wood-en Harness Is?
It Is Made In Fresno

Did you know that there is a harness factory in Fresno? There is one and it is equipped in the most modern manner with all of the latest labor saving devices; inventions that make the cost of harness much less, while the harness is really better than where all of the work is hand work. The machine does not slight its work; all of it is done thoroughly. That is one of the reasons why Wood-en harness is the best that you can buy in Fresno. There are others though, other reasons why Wood-en harness is better than Eastern factory made harness. One of these reasons lies in the fact that the leather used is of the best quality, tanned in the proper manner. This is an important feature and one that has much to do with the life of the harness.

Another thing that makes Wood-en harness better than ordinary harness is the sewing it receives. A better grade of thread is used and the stitching is done in a better manner. This gives it greater strength and secures the owner against the annoyance of using a harness that rips at the seams.

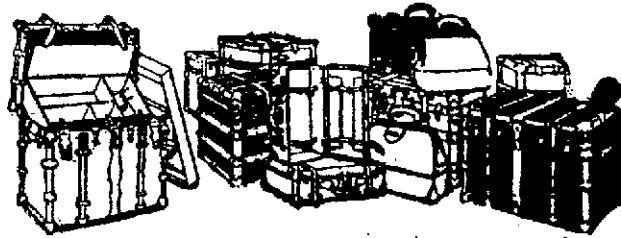

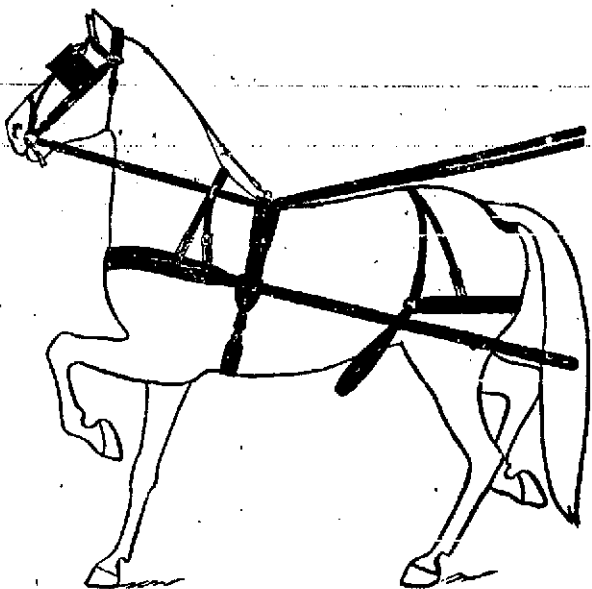

Our single and double driving harness is the handiest that can be bought in Fresno. It receives a great deal of attention in the little details, attention that makes it more comfortable for the horse and makes it last better. There are many little features about Wood-en harness that is not found on other harness, little things that add to the convenience.

We also make team harness of unusual strength and durability. It is backed by the strongest guarantee that we are able to frame. We have put our best work in on this harness. The best of carefully selected leather has been used. Many years of experience has made us able to judge leather and know what to choose. These are a few of the reasons we offer why you should patronize a home industry.

We also have a large stock of saddles of every kind. If you want any kind of saddle we can supply you with it. The prices are reduced on these saddles now. Our saddles are backed by the same strong guarantee that goes with our harness and other leather goods. We are closing out our stock of team harness; now is the time to buy.

We Make Our Own Harness
It Is Made Right and Has Our Own Guarantee

This is a real sale; one where the prices have been really lowered one-fourth or one-third. It is a sale where you can buy freely and be certain that you are getting the best of values because that is the only kind we sell. Our guarantee is that you will find everything exactly as we represent it. Now is the time to buy whatever you need. We are showing some of the most attractive leather articles and some of the most attractive prices that you ever saw. This is not a closing out sale or anything of that kind. We find that we have more stock than we feel that we should carry, and it is not moving as rapidly as it should. Therefore we have taken the means that will most readily appeal to you to get you to buy. We have lowered the prices.

Were You Ever In a Store Dealing In Leather Goods Only?

There Are But Two Larger Than "Wooden's"
In the United States

Do you know that the largest exclusive leather goods store in the entire West is in Fresno? There are just two stores of this kind in the United States that are larger. One is in Boston and one is in New York. That means that you have the largest stock to choose from right here in Fresno, a better selection than you can get in any city of the country with the exception of the two above named. It also shows why we are able to sell at lower prices. The specialty store is the one to trade with at all times.

We have a harness factory in the third story of our store at 1920-24 Tulare street. We have the other two floors crowded with all sorts of leather goods and associated articles, such as whips, robes, blankets, sponges and similar articles.

You can scarcely believe what a wide variety there is in a store of this kind until you see it with your own eyes. This is what we invite you to do. We want you to see the largest store dealing exclusively in leather goods there is west of New York.

AUTUMN DISPLAY

Clever New Gowns and Street Dresses

Fresh from the Hands of the Maker

—At prices that show the money saving advantages that are yours when you do your trading at Kutner's — and this advantage isn't just fancied, it's as real as it can be. — Besides operating five big department stores in the town around Fresno, we belong to a buying syndicate that embraces over two hundred big stores such as this, and the advantages we obtain in this method of purchasing exceeds that of the largest jobbers. — We sell at wholesale prices while other stores are selling at retail prices. — Ask to see our Eolian Dresses at $15.00 or our party dresses at $17.50. You'll say as we do they're unmatchable in Fresno at the price.

All Linen Waists $1.00 Caracul Coats $12.75 Reversible

—This store gives you all linen — and others can't always give you a cotton waist at $1.00. Linen costs more than cotton — you receive more for your dollar here — so that's one reason why we are forging ahead all the time. Tailored style with pocket, $1.00

—Most stores get as much as $20.00; some others advertise them as $18.50 values; this store sells them at $12.75. Only two firms in the United States make the Standard Fabric, so when you are told that this is made of Hinds & Harrison's Caracul, you know that there is nothing better — fine quilted lining, $12.75.

Coats $15.00

—The woman or girl who is interested in these smart reversible coats that can be worn both sides, will find that Kutner's have an exceedingly fine line — $15.00 — Coats for all occasions, for street or theater wear.

Autumn's Fashion Message for Girls

—With the soft rounded lines of girlhood setting the ideals for all fashion, special interest attaches to this autumn display of choicest styles for girls of all ages.

—Certainly the frills were never lovelier, more individual or better suited to enhance the charm of girlhood — Complete display Monday and a hearty welcome to mothers and daughters.

—Peter Thompson Dresses, $5.00, $14.95 and $21.95.

—Girls' Middy Blouses, 98c

Fine Tailored Suits at $21.95

—The price alone very seldom judges the quality of a suit. Take these suits at $21.95 — it's more a question of hard work than any other item that enters into the cost.

—This store is only one of a syndicate of 200 stores that would buy at the very least ten suits, and the average of the two hundred even at 5 suits each would mean 1000 for the maker to figure on. So you can really see there's a reason why the price is $21.95 instead of $25.00.

From the evidence of a relative it was learned that some months ago Mr. Flower was bitten on the hand, through a black rubber glove, by a hound of the end of a run at the close of November. Mr. Flower dismounted to attack the fox, and as he drove back the hounds and held the fox, he was bitten by the animal.

A hunt servant who was present said the inquiry that Mr. Flower made complained then about the fox.

THE FARMERS' INSTITUTES.

At this season of the year the farmers' institutes are in the minds of many agriculturists. The farmers' institute movement in the United States has reached a degree of importance that places it alongside of the leading institutions of the country organized in the interest of industrial education. Institutes are held annually in every state in the Union, and in all of the territories except possibly Porto Rico and Alaska. In number they total nearly 4,000. In 1910, 3,339 one-day meetings were held, about 2,800 two-day meetings, and nearly 250 three-day or more—with a total attendance of 395,903 at the 16,536 sessions.

The farmers' institute teaching force in the employ of the various state directors numbers over 1,000, about half of whom hold college degrees, while many others have taken partial college courses. In addition to this force the local managers employ altogether several thousand local lecturers, who read papers or deliver addresses at the meetings.

In California, institutes were held in 1910 in thirty-two out of the fifty-eight counties in the state, and consisted of 297 sessions. In addition, a round-up institute was held at Davis and a demonstration train was run. The lecturers from the agricultural college and experiment station devoted a total of 131 days' service to the work; fifteen state lecturers were employed for varying periods, and 183 local speakers made addresses.

The development of this form of agricultural instruction has taken place within about thirty years, and the greater part of it within the last fifteen years. It was brought about by the fact that about the time that the movement began the agricultural lands in many states were beginning to show the effects of constant cropping without rotation of the fertilizing elements thus abstracted, and the majority of their owners were coming to realize that the restoration of their lands to profitable production was a problem for the solution of which they needed the assistance of experts who had made a special study of this subject. Moreover, some of the Western states were receiving large numbers of colonists from the East, unacquainted with the Western conditions and crops. It was necessary for them to inform themselves concerning many things before they could farm to the best advantage in the new location.

Meetings were called by farmers of the various communities for conference and interchange of opinion respecting the difficulties that they were encountering. To these meetings successful farmers were invited, and given opportunity to explain the methods by which they had succeeded. Later, as the agricultural experiment stations were developed, expert scientists from these stations and professors of the agricultural colleges were brought in to announce the late discoveries related to agriculture, and to give advice as to new methods that might be introduced with prospect of success.

The feeling of need for information concerning their calling was so general among the farmers and the instruction which the experts gave was so helpful, that in all the states the demand for such institutions became urgent. In response to this demand the legislatures in most of the states provided for the organization and support of farmers' institutes. In 1903 the position of farmers' institute specialists was created in the United States Department of Agriculture, to provide for the collecting of data and the making of reports as to farmers' institute progress annually in the United States and abroad. It is also the duty of this office to assist in the work of the various states so far as is possible and to suggest plans and methods for making the institute work more effective.

At a still earlier time the "American Association of Farmers' Institutes" was formed, and has helped greatly in the institute work of the various states by enabling workers to get together and to discuss ways and means of regular intervals.

The indications now are that the institute has come to stay, and that only out of the early and crude forms there will be gradually developed a system that will be thoroughly organized for giving systematic instruction in agriculture—and become recognized as a necessary part of the general system of industrial education.

As yet the organization and work of the farmers' institutes in the different states varies greatly. In fact, until recently in practically no two of the states were the institutes organized in the same manner or conducted by the same methods. In some the management is under the control of a central organization, but each county institute is an independent unit. Others have both a central organization and local boards, each having distinct powers and being charged with specific duties. In some states the local organizations are created by legislative action under state laws, and consequently have continuous existence. In others they are without legal status and are temporary in character, new associations for institute purposes being formed each year. This diversity is due to the fact that the work is comparatively new, and its early development was by independent action by the several states, with out conference, and in many instances without precedent for their guidance.

But notwithstanding the diversity that has existed in many respects in conducting institutes in the various states, two features are, and have always been, common to all—an earnest purpose to carry valuable agricultural knowledge from the agricultural colleges and experiment stations to the farmers' homes, and to effect this by means of oral instruction given by capable teachers in institute assemblies.

The faithful carrying out of these purposes will, as the work develops, and the practice pursued in the different states becomes generally understood by the directors, naturally cause them to adopt such methods as experience has shown to be best adapted to the accomplishment of the aims in view. These efforts, assisted by the American Association of Farmers' Institutes workers, and the farmers' institute specialists of the office of experiment stations, will, it is believed, secure in the near future such a degree of co-operation as will lead ultimately to the substantial uniformity of methods throughout the country.

The forms of institute activity vary, as has been said, in different states. In the earlier days, and in some states at present, most of the meetings were general in nature; other states tend toward the special subject institutes, devoted to the discussion of but one topic, and from one or two days to a week long. These last are usually conducted by expert instructors who give practical demonstrations, wherever possible, in connection with their lectures. In one state agricultural "chautauks" are held, containing through a number of sessions. In other states there are special women's institutes, boys and girls institutes, etc.

One of the most valuable and distinguishing features of the institute in discussion is the informal character of the discussions which follow the lectures. Any new theory or improved method suggested is thereby subjected to the scrutiny and criticism of practical farmers. Many of these farmers have had a lifetime of experience along the line of the speaker's topic, and are well qualified to discuss the subjects presented from a practical standpoint and to call attention to any impracticable features advocated by the lecturer that might prevent their adoption by the general farmer.

But though the institutes are for the farmer, the value of such institute work is not for him alone. It helps the experiment stations and the national department of agriculture. Our scientific men, working in their college or department of agriculture laboratories and in other ways, are liable either to look at the problems on which they are working in too broad and general a way and thus lose sight of the particular needs of the farmers in different localities, or they may be so interested in the scientific side of the problems on which they are working that they forget in too large measure that these problems are given to them principally that they may work out something for the practical benefit of the farmer. Institutes bring the scientific men in closer touch with the practical farmers. They help the department of agriculture and the experiment stations by disseminating the agricultural information gathered by study and investigation.

The farmer, on the other hand, needs to come in close touch with the state experiment and the department of agriculture. He needs to know what each is doing and what the meaning of the various kinds of work is. He needs to find out more definitely just how the agricultural college, the experiment stations and the department of agriculture can help him. He needs to be aroused to greater interest in the work of the experiment stations, the agricultural college and the national department of agriculture, so that when questions relative to them arise in the state or national legislature the farmer of the country may take some active part in influencing legislation in the right way. The farmers' institutes give the farmer a great opportunity to bring his most pressing needs to bear upon the work of the various agricultural education and investigation agencies by suggesting lines of inquiry and by showing how the service can more efficiently benefit agriculture.

Farmers' institutes can, better than any other means, bring the farmer and the department of agriculture and other agricultural agencies into closer touch. For the institutes are not connected with any political scheme; they are non-sectarian and non-partisan; they are educational in nature, and they represent a very large number of farm people in an organized, official way.

The institutes are the complement of the agricultural education influences now organized for the uplifting of agriculture in the United States. The agricultural colleges and experiment stations are educating and training young men for intelligent farming and for the discovery and testing of agricultural facts of value. The farmers' institute takes these trained men and others self-trained and brings them to the practical application of the knowledge and actual demonstration in field and laboratory have shown to be true.

In the early stages of the institute work, and with the limited means at the disposal of the institute managers, the holding of a few meetings was all that could be attempted, but now, with more funds, increased interest, and clearer views of what the institute stands for, it is possible in many states to do much more.

In addition to carrying on the work of the regular institutes many states have been maintaining special meetings of institute character. Of these the movable school of agriculture is perhaps most promising. In 1910, 423 sessions of these schools were held, attended by 65,877 persons. Special subject institutes, round-up meetings, picnic and harvest-home meetings, and other forms of institute activity were also carried on. In 1910 one state held a meeting in connection with its normal school, attended by 117 teachers. Sixty-nine held demonstration meetings conducted in various states, with an attendance of 23,841. 444 institutes for women were held in fifteen states, and 160 sessions of institutes for young people.

But though the future looks very promising for institute work, if the institutes are to be of permanent and effective character, special meetings of institute character must be done. It should be thorough and specific, rather than superficial and general. It is important that the work be truly educational, teaching to think and to reason, rather than merely a pouring out of knowledge. It is important that it be of advantage to know them. And the work must contribute to the direct needs and requirements of the community where it is held.

Existing farmers' clubs, granges, etc., should be directly interested in the institute work, and through their interest and help, co-operation much can be accomplished in reaching the class to whom the institutes are of greatest service. Every possible factor must be recognized in proportion to its possible usefulness in contributing to the final results; for a proper co-operation between all of these various influences will not only increase the scope of the work but also its effectiveness, which is so potent in establishing its permanency. The experiment stations, the colleges, and the farmers must work together for the mutual benefit of all. The institute direction should of course be in the hands of one man who is responsible for the entire work, for divided responsibility is dangerous and does not make for permanency. But that does not prevent the co-operation of all the educational agencies that have been established for the farmer in an advisory or other way.

In many states representatives of all the farmers' organizations, agricultural education agencies, etc., are directly interested in and work for the farmers' institute organization of their state and county, suggesting and helping in whatever ways possible. Institute workers meet at the experiment station or agricultural college preparatory to the year's campaign for study and co-operation. Special incentives are made to superior workers and train them for their work and to make the work efficient and constantly of a higher grade.

A special effort is being made in many states to secure in the organization of the local institutes such a degree of stability as will not only keep them in existence during the year but energetically at work as well. Delaware, Illinois, Kansas, Michigan, Ohio and Oklahoma already have county institutes which are constituted under their laws and have continuous existence. In these states the county institute organizations are responsible to the state director or central board, and yet have sufficient personal independence of action to make it possible for any change in the personnel of the state director to affect their integrity. Work undertaken by these local organizations for the improvement of some conditions cannot be seriously affected by any change in the state administration. There is a great improvement over the system most common, where there is either no local organization or one so temporary as to virtually cease to exist at the end of the institute season. The loss by death or removal of the state director in such instances is always attended with great inconvenience and is sometimes a permanent injury to the work.

Establishing a properly constituted local organization in each county has undoubtedly tended to strengthen the institutes wherever the plan has been introduced and has made possible their expansion to meet the needs of the people. Numerous important subjects of interest to country people furnish work for the institutes during the intervals between the lecture seasons and prepare for them. The improvement of the livestock of the county, the introducing of new and valuable varieties of plants, the betterment of the roads, and many other subjects suggest themselves as suitable and profitable for the purpose.

It is said that the weakest point in the farmers' institute at present is in its failure to see that its teaching on the platform is put into practice. Valuable information is given at an institute meeting. At its close the whole matter is dropped for a year, possibly never to be referred to. There is a failure to "follow up" what has been recommended and to make sure that the teaching of the institute is not lost and that the money of the state expended in that meeting has not been wasted. Giving instruction is only a part of the duty of the institute. Getting information into practice by the people is the main purpose of the farmers' institute. It is organized, permanent county organizations could do much to bring this to pass.

Mr. John Hamilton, the farmers' institute specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture, also advises that the state organization do more for the "follow up" line. He says "After the information has been given the chief work of the institute begins. If the teaching has been the giving of fruit, then in all communities where this has been advised some one should be located to see that at least a few of those who were interested take up the work and carry it on according to the plan proposed. If this is left to individual initiative, it may or may not be done, and often even if undertaken, may fall for lack of proper and timely expert advice and attention. More time and more money should be spent after the lecture in getting it applied than in its preparation and delivery."

Every great discovery and truth is valueless until put into use, no matter of what nature it is. Special attention should therefore be given to getting the facts that are presented to the institute audiences incorporated into the practice of the community. And that this may be done, the farmers must not only give their attendance to the institute, but their personal work. Only in this way can the proper efficiency be secured from the work.

RARE FISH FROM FLORIDA
With 274 specimens of 62 varieties of tropical fish from the waters about Key West, Fla., Chapman Grant, of the New York aquarium, and Danforth H. Ferguson, the 18-year-old grandson of Mr. H. D. Armour, of Kansas City, arrived aboard the Comal, of the Mailory Line. The fish were brought in tanks, and they arrived in good order. Mr. Ferguson expressed recently a desire to go shark hunting with Mr. Grant, and the trip was arranged two weeks ago. A week was spent in fishing off Key West, with good sport, and by the aid of a glass-bottomed boat both Mr. Grant and Ferguson learned much of the animal life on the coral reefs. Several sharks were caught, but the quantities of rare tropical fish were so great they decided there was more sport in obtaining specimens. Through the glass bottom of the boat the fish could plainly be seen, and wire traps were set in the most advantageous locations.

Butterfly fish, "doctors," with a bone lancet sheathed near the bill; shark suckers, Southern puffers, parrot fish, blue tangs, Spanish hog fish, snoots, toad fish, and many others were a few of the varieties brought back, many of which were new to the aquarium tanks. Two great Jew fish, each weighing 250 pounds, were caught.

NEW FIELD FOR WOMEN.
The appointment of Florence J. Conant, of Iowa, as physical director in William Woods college in Fulton, Mo., has disclosed a new and feminine field for women. Many gymnasiums now have women instructors in calisthenics, and as an evidence they are crowding men in the work. It has been proved one-third of the physical culture teachers in the public schools of the country are women. Many girls who come from college with strong physiques have gone into this new branch, and not a few gain a livelihood by drilling weak and anaemic society women, who otherwise would be unable to go through their social obligations. In many families young women instructors are engaged for girls as frequently as boxing instructors are employed for growing boys. Girls with the object of taking up the work after their graduation from college specialize during their school life in all branches of athletics, so that they will be fully equipped.—From the New York Press.

Los Angeles, California, April 9th, 1911.

Event: Twenty-four hour race, car wins making the most miles in that time. Warren won and holds twenty-four hour record today. Warren covered 1154 miles, which is an average of over 48 miles per hour. No repairs or replacements were made on the car that went through this race. It made the whole race with but one set of Firestone tires, which shows that the car is wonderfully easy on tires. The drivers were cautioned not to make over fifty miles per hour, although some laps were made in 54 seconds time. During the night the car was stopped twenty-two times to light the tail lamp, which kept going out. At last it finally had to stop and put on an electric tail lamp. Total delay of the car for this reason being two hours. This was the only trouble encountered.

Elgin, Illinois, August 26th, 1910.

Event: 130 mile road race. Warren wins second, being beaten only by Hearns, who drove the high power German Benz. The Warren tagged its big rival over the 130 mile course at a mile a minute speed. A big percentage of the cars starting fell by the way with broken axles, frames, etc., in this race, due to the terrible condition of the course. Warren held up to the last and won second, next to the German Benz.

JUGGLES WITH DEATH TO RETRIEVE HIS LOST HONOR

Deeds of daring and desperation among the Philippine constabulary, that small force which keeps the peace of the Philippine islands, while they are by no means infrequent even now, have won for the most part kept hidden. Intrepid officers, who should they display the slightest sign of fear, would forever lose their authority over the natives, have lived in the wild interior for weeks with their lives in constant danger. Their work is taken as a matter of course and routine, and few of the commissioned men think twice of their peril.

The story related by Lieutenant Commander R. B. Beck, U. S. N., is an actual in Philippine history. It is true—with the exception of the names, which have been changed for obvious reasons—and all is well remembered among the men of the constabulary. Much of the wild pursuit made by Lieutenant Beck is shrouded in mystery, as he is not inclined to talk about his feat. He was criticized severely for his judgment and even now feels some of the mutiny of his men thus under his after exploits can contrast.

On the northwest shore of the island of Mindanao, of the Philippine group, cutting deep into the rugged coast line, the Bay of Dapitan opens wide to the southward. From out the vivid green of the hills and close to the beach the town lifts its view through the sea haze.

Heavened in on three sides by almost impassable mountain ranges, Dapitan was chosen in the days of the Spaniards to be one of its penal colonies. Scarcely fifty miles in an air line is Misamis to the westward, while Zamboanga itself is less than a hundred miles to the south. Dapitan is isolated from these towns by the fiercest of mountain tribes. To pass through the country of the Mangians in safety it is necessary to take a large escort, fully armed.

Fronting the clean little plaza are the Presidencia and the guard, the latter occupied by the Philippine constabulary. Off to the right several hundred yards and across the plaza a whitewashed wooden house, once the Chinese store, serves as the residence of the two American officers serving with the native company. Their duty is to guard the peaceful Christian natives of the coast hamlets from the fierce raids of the non-Christian tribes of the interior.

The coast guard steamer had arrived and lay snugly at her anchor chain a stone's throw from the beach. Inside the low sand spit thrown up by the sea and moulded to form by the rush of the summer floods, a small boat lay beached, while near by stood two men in khaki, with red trimmings, the uniform of the Philippine constabulary.

"I hope to return within the month," Captain Winthrop said, as he shook hands with his lieutenant. "Remember my advice," he added, in an anxious voice. "The Dapitan native, descended as he is from the convict, has blood in his veins that makes him doubtful in loyalty. He cannot be trusted. Study each situation as it arises before you act, and above all don't mutilate your non-commissioned officers."

Lieutenant Beck listened impatiently and nodded carelessly. "Winthrop takes himself too seriously," were the youngster's unspoken thoughts. "What can it be to be nervous, thirty-seven natives that should give a white man a moment's worry?"

LETHARGY FILLS THE TOWN.

After Captain Winthrop had departed for Manila, whence he had been summoned, Lieutenant Beck allowed the tropical lethargy to creep in upon the duty life of Dapitan. Even the fine honored inspections of the barracks and town he failed to make. This duty, entirely agreeable to his captain, seemed distasteful to the younger man. He did not see the necessity of exposing himself to the heat of a scorching sun. The sergeants could do this duty, and they, finding their officer apathetic, soon grew more independent. It must be known that a native sergeant stands high in the eyes of his people, even higher than do their white officers.

Seated in his easy chair, with book on knee, Lieutenant Beck's thoughts were far removed from the lonely place of his enforced exile. The summer rains had begun and the air was heavily laden with the damp perfume of the earth. The flashes of lamps in the village cut mistily the moist darkness. His servants had removed the remains of his lonely repast and had gone to their quarters in the rear of the house. Through the open door the sentry or post could be seen pacing tirelessly. A fusillade of shots caught the young man to his feet, with an unknown fear gripped him. The sentry stood rigidly alert, his rifle held ready before him, facing his town.

"What is it?" the lieutenant exclaimed anxiously, as, grasping his revolver, he stood by the sentry's side, straining his gaze through the murky atmosphere.

"No sabe, Senor," the man answered. Lieutenant Beck strode down the steps and turned to cross the plaza. Half way a small band of natives met him.

"Help us, Senor!" the frightened presidente entreated, while his companions displayed the lieutenant in their subject and unreasonable terror. "The soldiers are killing innocent people!"

The full force of the situation fairly swept the lieutenant from his feet. His reasoning powers deserted him at the inception of this crisis. A great anger swelled up within him. This act he refused to consider in the light of an outrage against the peaceable citizens of the town. To him it was but a lawless act directed against his own supremacy. Beside himself with rage, he reached the court. There he found the first sergeant and the guard of the day under arms and ready. Taking these he led them on a run toward the scene of the riot, where deafening shots were still being fired, while in his rear timidly followed the presidente and his terrified friends.

The lawbreakers were encountered and disarmed. They submitted to arrest without a show of force. A sergeant and extra men were placed by Lieutenant Beck's orders in custody of the guard house. The lieutenant returned to his quarters well satisfied with his night's work.

"The plaza grows is too long," he thought, as he prepared himself for the night. "Sentry," he called suddenly, and the soldier appeared, saluting stiffly. "Tell the first sergeant to turn out all the prisoners at reveille to all grass in the plaza."

The unhappy sergeant arose from his bed and began to dress. He began to dress, and with the eyes of a curious throng of villagers upon them he and his fellow prisoners moved under a burning sun cutting the grass with the short blades provided.

STILL HOLDS AUTHORITY

During the short interval before mess call the prisoners clustered together out of earshot of the sentries, and when the call was sounded the work was completed. The constabulary soldiers had already fallen in ranks and been marched to a shelter behind the barracks where the men moved. The prisoners fell in and between the two sentries marched back to the court. They held their formation under the taunting and derisive eyes of their comrades at mess through the wide entrance of the barracks and up the stairs to the dormitory, where were kept all the arms for the command.

This Lieutenant Beck saw from his porch and smiled triumphantly. As the prisoners disappeared within the court the lieutenant turned to enter his house. The rain of the night before had been drunk by the thirsty ground; over the mountains to the southward ominous clouds hung black and threatening.

"That will teach them not to disobey my orders," he exclaimed vindictively. "If the news of this 'choupo' I shall have to make a lengthy explanation. Well, I think that will hold them for a while." He ended fiercely. "That sergeant will be eating out of my hand before I get through with him."

As if in expostulation, contradicting the spoken thoughts of the white man, a jet of flame shot out from the window of the court, while the rattle of a rugged volley of musketry struck terror to the heart of the young officer on the threshold of his house.

With eyes dilating with anxious fear, he saw his soldiers—a moment before seated quietly eating their Monday meal—rise in quick alarm, some to fall back writhing on the ground. Too unnerved to move, Lieutenant Beck saw his men huddle together for a few brief seconds, while a deadly fire was directed toward them from the windows almost directly above. He saw the tall figure of his native first sergeant erect, fearlessly driving the demoralized men before him, and with bare hands force them to follow him in a charge up the steps of the court. The rifles of the whole command were in the hands of the natives.

Hastily entering the house, Lieutenant Beck snatched up his revolver, but as he regained the porch he was met with such a well directed volley from the windows of the court that he recoiled in sudden alarm for his own life. To cross the plaza in face of that fire he knew would be tantamount to almost certain death.

In a frenzy of anger and impotency he fired his revolver at the windows where he knew the natives were, yet he could discern no single figure to aim at within the dark interior. With sinking heart he saw the first sergeant and those who had followed him suddenly retreat from the court. In a panic they rushed in a mad dash across the plaza. Many of them fell hit by the natives' bullets before reaching the shelter of the houses opposite. The lieutenant sat dazed as he saw his first sergeant, wounded and on his hands and knees drag himself painfully across the recently cut grass in plain view of the men at the court windows. Fascinated he watched the gallant attempt to escape the withering fire directed upon the man, the spurts of dust showing how good was the aim. Then the sergeant fell prone on his face, clawing the grass in the final spasms of death.

Lieutenant Beck saw that the barracks were lost and when his combined senses had revived he ran toward the presidencia building, a target for the natives. He reached his quarters in time to find the door open and the sentry posted outside.

RESTORE GRAY HAIR TO NATURAL COLOR

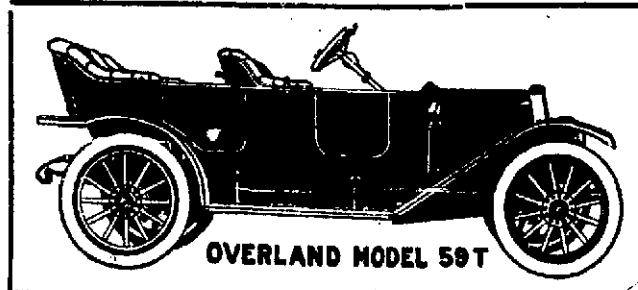

By Common Garden Sage,
a Simple Remedy for Dandruff, Falling,
Faded, Gray
Hair.

The old idea of using sage for darkening the hair is again coming in vogue. Our grandmothers used to have dark, glossy hair at the age of seventy-five. While our mothers have white hair before they are fifty. Our grandmothers used to make a "sage tea" and apply it to their hair. The tea made their hair soft and glossy, and gradually restored the natural color.

One objection to using such a preparation was the trouble of making it, especially as it had to be made every two or three days, on account of going quickly. This objection has been overcome, and by asking almost any first-class druggist for Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy the public can get a superior preparation of sage, with the admixture of sulphur, another valuable remedy for hair and scalp troubles. Daily use of this preparation will not only quickly restore the color of the hair, but will also stop the hair from falling out, and make it grow.

Get a bottle from your druggist today. Use it, and see for yourself how quickly dandruff goes and gray hairs vanish.

The Car That Stands the Test On Any Kind of Road, at Any Kind of Work, Under Any and All Conditions

We Have Delivered Cars This Week to Alford Baird, H. A. Pratt, J. E. Foster

The success of all previous models, covering a period of six years, has proven beyond question the superiority of Dorris Cars. By their consistency, endurance and absolute reliability, they have impressed the public that it is possible to build a motor car of the highest type, to sell at a medium price.

The model "G" for 1912 is again a refinement of our preceding practice, the principal changes being in the clutch and body design.

The Clutch as now designed is a development of our successful multiple disc type, and in making the present change the object in view has been to reduce the attention required to a minimum. The plates are faced with a special material, entirely eliminating the use of oil, making a clutch which will run indefinitely without attention.

The body design has been given a great deal of careful thought and study to bring out the graceful lines of the fore door type and still retaining the practicability of the open car as regards the gear change and break levers.

These are placed inside the fore doors and in a position to be easy to manipulate, still not interfering with the comfort of the driver, also allowing in unpleasant weather, the curtains to be fastened to the body. All the control mechanism being inside the car.

Experience has taught that in extreme warm weather the fore doors are at a disadvantage, and for the greatest comfort of the passengers we have made the fore door detachable, and when removed does not mar the finish or design of the car.

AMERICAN MERCHANT RELEASED IN MEXICO

Will Sue for $12,500 for False Imprisonment
By Torres.

NOGALES, ARIZ., Oct. 28.—After having lain in a Mexican prison since last March, Abraham Saleeby, a merchant of Nogales, returned home today, a sentence of two years and a half imposed upon him having been revoked by the supreme military court at Mexico City.

Saleeby was taken into custody at Hermosillo and sentenced by a military court assembled at the order of former Governor Luis Torres, who charged him with having tried to induce soldiers of Diaz to desert. Torres left Mexico when the Alamo rebellion succeeded. Saleeby promptly entered a claim with the State Department against Mexico for $12,500.

WOMAN'S CLUB TO OPPOSE PUGILISM

HELENA, MONT., Oct. 28.—Declaring football to be "a plane with pugilism and bullfighting and as dangerous as war," the Helena Woman's Club today adopted a resolution asking the co-operation of the women's clubs in the state to abolish the gridiron sport.

The action was brought about by injuries to Charles Lange at Bozeman, while trying for the State Agricultural College eleven.

Lange's mother is president of the organization. Her son is not expected to live.

AIRSHIP TRIP POSTPONED.
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 28.—Melville Vaniman today called off the trial flight of the airship Akron, scheduled for this afternoon. A twenty-mile northwest wind made the trip too risky. The trial was to have been made over the ocean as a test in preparation for an attempt to cross the Atlantic to Europe.

INTEREST IN TRUST ENDED WITH DEATH

Judge Austin having refused a motion for a reapportionment as not the proper remedy, the heirs of Sarah E. Downing made application yesterday to strike out from the inventory an asset item of $5777.76, represented by a note of J. Q. and G. W. Anderson of October 27, 1908, payable in one year at 8 per cent. The heirs state that this money represents a trust that left to Mrs. Downing under the will of Jacob Downing, the husband, for a brother and sister, subject to the wife's life estate interest. Mrs. Downing loaned out the trust fund money as evidenced by the note and it has been included as an estate of her estate though all interest in it ceased upon her death.

AUTOMOBILE FIRM SUES ON CONTRACT

The Cobb-Evans Automobile Company brought suit yesterday to recover a balance of $1250 due on a locomobile purchased in June last by Newton and Dan Kinchloe, with E. E. Phipps signing as surety on the contract of purchase for $1850. The company asks that the printed form of contract be reformed to express the true understanding of all concerned. The blank line in the contract form was filled out so as to make it read that a $150 installment is payable every "July" instead of "monthly" after the 22nd of last June. The Kinchloes in fact only paid the June and July installments.

ABERNATHY BOYS REACH SACRAMENTO

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 28.—Temple Abernathy, aged 7, and brother, Louis Abernathy, aged 11, arrived in Sacramento on horseback this morning, after a ride that has taken them almost across the continent. The boys set forth from Coney Island, August 1, and were to make the trip to San Francisco in sixty days to win a purse of $10,000 offered by eighteen millionaires of New York. They were delayed in Utah and Wyoming when their horses got away, and again lost five days in Wyoming because of high water.

For 4,500 miles the boys rode unaccompanied. Their father, J. R. Abernathy, accompanied them from the Rocky Mountains to Sacramento.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 28.—Patrick Farrelly, who recently shot J. A. Holland in the city prison here, accusing him of having assaulted Mrs. Farrelly and having denied a signed confession of the crime, was admitted to probation in the Superior Court here today. Holland was lured from Los Angeles by a letter from Mrs. Farrelly, after she had told her husband of what occurred. WOMAN ARRAIGNED FOR HORSEWHIPPING JUDGE

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 28.—Mrs. Christina Olson, who horsewhipped Superior Judge John F. Main in the court house corridor yesterday because he had set aside two jury verdicts in her favor, was arraigned in the criminal court today on a charge of assault in the third degree. Immediately after the arraignment she was taken before Judge Main to answer the charge of contempt of court. The judge said he would pass upon the case next Saturday. Following the arraignment of Mrs. Olson, her husband, George Olson, a painter, was arrested in the court room, charged with having made threats to kill Judge Main. He will be required to furnish a bond of $500 to keep the peace.

MISSOURI GOVERNOR CONTINUES CASE

Alleged Embezzler Myers Fighting Extradition; Deputy Sheriff Boloff Expected Today.

The governor of Missouri will formally consider the extradition of J. P. Myers, former bank cashier at Keokuk, who is wanted here on a charge of embezzlement, on November 25th. Attorney O. L. Everts who returned yesterday morning to Fresno from Kansas City, where he went in the interest of the Keokuk people who allege that they were swindled by Myers.

Myers is out on bail and is making a hard fight to escape being returned here to stand trial. He has engaged attorneys to fight his extradition, and so far he has been successful in not having the extradition papers from California honored by the Missouri governor. Deputy Sheriff Oscar Boloff, who has been in Kansas City waiting to bring Myers here for trial, is expected to return to Fresno today. Myers' hope is in the fact that the laws of California and Missouri differ radically in what constitutes embezzlement, and Myers contends that the facts upon which he is charged in this state do not constitute embezzlement as it is known in Missouri. Mr. Everts yesterday expressed confidence that Myers would be returned. Additional evidence is to be furnished from this state.

MANY OFFENDERS IN POLICE COURT

A large crowd of petty offenders yesterday morning crowded Judge H. F. Briggs, when he took the bench in police court. James Carroll was sent to jail for ten days for disturbing the peace. He ate a meal at a restaurant and then refused to pay for it. The restaurant man's peace was disturbed. M. Bugbee was fined $5 for drunkenness.

Thomas Moore and Joe Cliney were sentenced to thirty days in jail for begging on the street, but as the men promised to leave town the commitments were withdrawn. Z. Skiffington was fined $5 for drunkenness. A man can be arraigned on a charge of assaulting Thomas Benna and was returned to jail in default of bail.

HUME WOMAN FINED FOR SELLING WINE

A fine of $50 was yesterday morning imposed upon Mrs. Margherita Andrews of Hume by City Justice Graham after she pleaded guilty to a charge of selling liquor without a license. In entering her plea of guilty, Mrs. Andrews said that she had a government license to sell liquor and that was all she supposed that it was necessary to assure to the magistrate. The magistrate warned Mrs. Andrews not to sell liquor unless she first secured a county liquor license. She conducts a boarding house at Hume and it is said to have served wine during the meals.

THINK IT OVER!

Over seventy legal reserve Fire Insurance Companies doing business in California in 1910; only three of them were California companies. Is there room for another home company? THINK IT OVER.

In the last ten years statistics prove that the fire insurance business in California has practically trebled. THINK IT OVER.

In no sense has the introduction of new capital into this line of business kept pace with its growth. Why not? THINK IT OVER.

Statistics prove that during the year 1910 that after paying all losses, commissions and expenses the companies operating in California cleaned up a net profit of over five millions of dollars, or enough to show an earning of over 10 per cent on fifty millions of capital. Does California offer a good field in which another home company may successfully and profitably operate? THINK IT OVER.

THE SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY contributed in premiums two millions of dollars to the fire companies in 1910. The same ratio of profit applying that govern results in the state shows that this valley alone contributed to the net profits made the enormous sum of $700,000.

Don't you think it would be to our advantage to keep this money at home? THINK IT OVER.

Analyze the foregoing figures and learn that during the year of 1910 the San Joaquin Valley contributed to the profits of the Fire Insurance Companies for each individual minute approximately $433, for each individual hour of 1910 $80, and for each day of that year $1920, and for each week $13,450, and for each month in the neighborhood of $58,000. Where it is within our power to stop a drain of this kind should we do it? THINK IT OVER.

If these figures are facts, can you figure where any man in the San Joaquin Valley can consistently withhold his support from the Pacific National Fire Insurance Company, now being financed in the city of Fresno? THINK IT OVER.

Insurance Commissioner Hotchkiss of the State of New York within the last few months made the statement publicly that the "need for new fire insurance companies is more serious than the need for bread." When an authority of this high character makes an assertion, isn't it worth consideration? THINK IT OVER.

The Pacific National Fire Insurance Company invited your co-operation and is justified in predicting for you handsome returns for your support. A home company, financed with home money, officered and directed by home men, selected by you. Isn't it a golden opportunity and doesn't it deserve your support? THINK IT OVER.

Give it an expression of your support and consideration by cutting out and mailing in the coupon to be found herewith.

CITRUS BELT IN FRESNO FOOTHILLS COMPRISES AN EMPIRE IN ITSELF

ing protected on the north by the latter. It is in the great Central California Thermal belt, the orange mother lode, which runs along Porterville, Lindsay and Mount Campbell and has proved to be practically flawless and admirably adapted to citrus culture.

Not only is its location good from a general point of view, as being in the "thermal belt," but it is also particularly fortunate in that it is at a considerable elevation above the immediately adjoining lands, both to the east and to the west, thus affording the air drainage necessary to avoid frosts. However, the best of proof on this point lies in the fact that on nearby and less favorably situated lands are vigorous and successful groves varying in age from one year to full maturity.

The water supply in from pits sunk in the lower-lying gravel beds of Kings River bottom, just beyond the western end of the tract, from which point it is pumped into reservoirs and distributed through steel and concrete pipes, under pressure, to each 10-acre lot. A proportionate interest in the water supply and in the distributing system is sold with the land to each purchaser, without additional cost, so that the landholders get their water at the actual cost of maintaining and operating the system. As the plant has been designed by the best engineering talent obtainable, this will give water at a low cost and under the most convenient arrangement.
In this same neighborhood lies the Abadale district, being developed by Santa Fe officials and employees. There are a number of beautiful young groves. Colonization Agent Soargers has a particularly beautiful grove of young trees. Twenty-five or thirty acres of this grove are available and are from 10 to 40 acres in this tract, and are immediately adjacent to it. The vice-president of the Rock Island is among the big railroad men interested in orange culture in this district.
To the north of Mt. Tech-E-Min-Nee in the Tiny Valley lies the Kings River Thermal tract of some 5000 acres. This has a couple of years' development, there being a dozen homes on the tract and, with from 20 to 30 acres planted this spring, and 250 to be set out the coming spring. Water here is obtained from wells at a moderate depth, so that deep lift pumps are not required. There are already seven wells on the tract and an accompanying illustration gives an idea of the water possibilities.

GIRL TRAMPS FOR LOVE.

In Trousers and Sweater, She Didn't Look Much Like a Boy.
She didn't follow him through all the world, but she did follow him $2 million on foot from Stamford, Conn., to Bedford Station. And when, in addition to that, a girl lets her sweetheart cut off her beautiful flowing locks and dresses in boy's clothing for the sake of being with him, a little thing like following him through all the world becomes a very serious matter.
The girl was Miss Mary McDougall, of 77 Gray Rock place, Stamford. The boy is John Zeaman, of 415 Main street, in the same city. She is 20 and small and comely, he is 19 and tall and broad-shouldered.
As boy and girl they were a well-matched couple, so far as appearances go, but as two boys they seemed ill-assorted. At least, they seemed so to four detectives of the Alexander avenue police station, who saw them come out of a pawn shop at Third avenue and One Hundred and Fourth street. The one in the black sweater and the cap that had to be pinned into a neat at the back, had astonishingly dainty feet for a young man, and when she spoke her voice had such a high pitched note that the detectives decided to speak to the two comrades.
The piping voice suddenly sank into silence, but the insistence of the detectives finally forced an explanation, and all was revealed.
On the way to the Morrisania police station the girl clung to the boy's arm. When arraigned before the Desk Zeaman answered all questions frankly. He said he had worked in a Stamford bakery, while Miss McDougall was employed in a dry goods store. Her parents refused to let her associate with him, and so they decided to run away.
They were afraid to take a train out of Stamford, so they set off across country for Bedford Station. Zeaman had brought an extra suit of his own, and Miss McDougall put it on when they were a little way out of town. It was a gray suit, with gray cap, black sweater and black shoes.
This done, Zeaman took a pair of shears from his suit case and cropped her hair. He made a pretty bad job of it, from an artistic point of view. But he did his best.
It took them all night to reach Bedford Station, but they rested frequently, and once made an attempt to sleep.
In the morning they boarded the first New York train from Bedford. Zeaman had just $20 on him, and they decided to pawn the feminine clothing and a few little articles of jewelry. It was their plan to go to Newark, where Zeaman thought he could get work and save money until they had enough to go West.
The pair were packed with Stamford, and soon received a reply from the chief of police who would be down directly to take back the elopers.

HE LOVES HIS JAIL.

Michael Murphy had need of the German interpreter when he was arraigned for sentence before Magistrate Smith, in the Long Island City court. He speaks only German. He has spent 35 years inside the Queens county jail. He has been in the habit when that institution was located out at Mineola, away back in the old days of Queens county. He found the institution so much to his liking that when at the time of the opening of the new penitentiary at Rikers Island, he moved to the new place in 1917. He went along, and his name has since been registered with unfailing regularity once or twice a year on the jail books.
Having spent so long a time in the jail Murphy considers it his home. He doesn't want to be locked out overnight, and whenever his term expires he loses no time in appearing before the nearest magistrate and making a complaint of vagrancy against himself, and through an interpreter generally makes the term as long as the law permits. He is a handy man around the jail. His latest sentence expired the other morning, and after getting his breakfast in the jail he went to the police court in Fifth street and made the usual complaint of vagrancy against himself. It was a busy day in court, and he asked the interpreter to hurry his case, as he wanted to get back in jail in time for his dinner. He was sentenced to six months. With the commitment papers in his hand he hurried back to the jail, and after having his usual pedigree taken, he got busy on his customary round.—New York Sun.

EVANGEL OF THE SWORD.

Italy is not in Tripoli to Christianize the Country.

A press dispatch from Detroit reports that a speaker at an important meeting of Christian clergymen glorified the Italian attack upon Turkey as a driving forward of the boundaries of Christianity, and declared that the conflict for the Christianization of Tripoli was justified, no matter what its brutal features might be. It is added that the ministers applauded these utterances.
If we remember aright, one of the chief indictments against Mohammedanism has always been that it was propagated by the sword. The Mohammedan conquerors, we have been told, were wont to give those whom they conquered the choice between accepting Islam or being killed. Perhaps some caustics may argue that in dealing with Mohammedans we must do as the Mohammedans do. In that case apologies are due for much that has been said against them on account of practices which Christians now adopt. It may be that, in view of some, the Gospel of Peace and Good Will, as well as civilization, does not get forward upon a powder cart. Then we should expect to see these advocates of militant evangelization direct their anathemas against the peace societies and announce the Hague as the abomination of desecration.

But we have an idea that there are many who think that the pushing forward of Christianity on the points of bayonets and at the muzzle of cannon would be a strange anachronism in the twentieth century, and that it is infinitely more honorable and decent to say that Italy is taking Tripoli because she wants it for political purposes and not her imperial expansion than to pretend that the deed is being done for the propagation of the Gospel of Christ. There are some men who prefer even largeness to hypocrisy.—From the New York Tribune.

THE MONK AND HIS WHITE CAT

Peace my white cat, and I.
Silent my special crafts;
Hunting mice his one pursuit.
Mine to shoot keen spirit shafts.
Rest I love, all Fame beyond.
In the bond of some rare book;
Yet while Fangur from his play
Cue, my way, no jealous look.
Thus alone within one cell
Safe we dwell—not dull the tale—
Since his ever-favorite sport
Each to court will never fail.

Now a mouse to swell his spoils
In his toils he speaks with skill;
Now a meaning deeply thought
I have caught with startled thrill.

Now his green full-shining gaze
Lies his eyes against the wall;
Now his keen glances mark
Through the dark bright knowledge fall.

Leading up with joyful purr,
In mouse for his sharp claw sticks;
Problems difficult and dear
With my spear I, too, transfix.

Crossing not once other's will,
Diverse still, yet still allied,
Following each his own lone ends,
Constant friends we here abide.

Fangur, master of his art,
Plays his part in prunkish youth;
While in age sedate I clear
Shadows from the sphere of Truth.
—Alfred Percival Graves, in the Spectator.

THE RULE OF REASON

Continuing his attack on President Taft's appointments to the Supreme Court, W. J. Bryan, in the Commons, says the speech of George W. Perkins in Ohio explains why Charles E. Hughes was appointed a justice of the high court. Mr. Bryan says:

"Those who want to know why Gov. Hughes was appointed to the Supreme bench can find it in the speech made last week by Mr. Perkins, until recently a partner of J. Pierpont Morgan. Mr. Perkins says that Gov. Hughes was the man put forward in 1903 to represent the Republican party's position on the trust question, and that Gov. Hughes in his speech at Youngstown, Ohio, constituted the Republican promise to amend the anti-trust law as follows: 'In our progress we must avoid false steps. Ours must be the rule of reason.'"
"Here we have it: Gov. Hughes was put forward to represent the Republican party as he asserted to the trusts that 'the rule of reason' for which they had been waiting for more than ten years would be adopted. Congress refused to keep its promise, so Gov. Hughes was put on the Supreme bench and helped to amend the law in accordance with the Republican promise.

"Here is a chain of circumstantial evidence sufficient to convict in a criminal court and yet some of our Democratic leaders are willing to allow this gigantic conspiracy to be carried out. Can they be trusted to represent the Democratic sentiment of the country?"—Lincoln, Neb., dispatch to the New York Herald.

"A little girl whose father dotes on her generous nature gave him an unexpected surprise the other day," said H. B. Warner, of "Alias Jimmy Valentine" fame.

"The little maid stood in the doorway, one hand on the handle. For a moment she gazed thoughtfully at her father, who was preparing to take his afternoon siesta."

"Papa," she said, "do you know what I'm going to give you for your birthday when it comes?"

"No, dear," answered her fond father, "not to mind."

"A nice, new china shaving mug, with gold flowers on it all around," said the little maid.

"But, my dear," explained the parent, "papa has a nice one, just like that, already."

"No, he hasn't," his little daughter answered, thoughtfully. "Cos—cos—I've just dropped it."—November Young's Companion.

SHE WANTED A DYNAMO.
Supt. McArthur, of the Montreal carhouse of the public service railway, was called on the telephone and a woman's voice asked:

"Is this the carhouse?"
On being answered in the affirmative the voice said: "A great accident has happened."

"On which line?" asked the superintendent.
"An aged woman has just stepped on a needle and it has broken in her foot. She is suffering great pain, and wishes to know if she was conveyed to the carhouse in a cab if you would allow her to place her foot on a dynamo to draw the needle out."

McArthur thought the experiment would be dangerous and advised the calling of a physician.—Montreal (N. J.) Dispatch to New York Times.

JUGGLES WITH DEATH TO RETRIEVE LOST HONOR

beat without injury, on the way out counted a handful of his dismounted men, and ordered them to follow. At the presidential he found four policemen, exactly talking and gesturing. Now, calm amid the turmoil, the lieutenant organized his forces to defend the building against attack. Four single action revolvers and a half dozen pocket pistols were the only arms available in the office. And for these arms only twelve rounds of ammunition could be found for each.

NATIVES LEND SOME AID

Stallioning his men, numbering sixteen, at the windows, Lieutenant Beck ordered a few civilians first to show the multitudes that the building was defended. He showed as if with cool the his eyes passed over the plaza. Fifteen of his men by there dead or else fatally wounded. Twelve men and some of those severely wounded, were all that now were alive and loyal. Eight, led by the sergeant, held his barracks and nearly all the arms and ammunition.

His brain in a fever of anxiousness, Lieutenant Beck gazed out through the open window. The courtyard was in darkness. His mind conjured up a dim picture of the multitudes. What were they doing? Then he imagined dim shadows, forms crossing stealthily the plaza before him. Arousing himself he posted men hurriedly on the stairs, taking his own station at the window above the single entrance to the building. Twice his revolver had spoken, but the flashes only made heavier the strain of waiting and the echo of the reports mocked him. The mazy phantoms at which he had fired remained as they were. No answering shots had come to dispel the illusion of an impending danger.

"Vamon," he called, straightening up from his crouching position. "You, Manuel, stay here with your Jolico," he said to the president.

His twelve men followed him almost joyfully down the steps and into the storm. Each clutching a sharp bladed knife, a deadly hand to hand weapon in the hands of the Filipinos. The rain still came down in torrents, but the lightning flashes had become less frequent. Huddled close to the presidential to hear the gasping instructions of their leader, a blinding flash of lightning made the plaza and surroundings as bright as noonday. There were the bodies of his martyred men in the plaza grass; the court windows revealed deserted.

Grasping his revolvers firmly Lieutenant Beck led the way to the court door. They reached it and without a second's stop mounted the stairs. Their footsteps were noiseless in the thunder of the storm. Crouching at the entrance to the barracks, then they waited with closed drawn breath. The darkness pressed upon them from all sides. Then a welcome flash of lightning illuminated the disorderly interior. The room was empty of human occupants. Striking a light, Lieutenant Beck carefully advanced and felt the walling mugs. The mattresses had gone. His foot touched an object of the floor and he recoiled with a low cry of alarm, pointing his revolver immediately downward. It was the body of one of the multitudes. There were then but seven left.

To the other's amazement the rifles had not been disturbed; forty stood there in their racks and his men already grasped their own pieces. Several boxes of ammunition lay broken open on the floor and these cartridges littered the room. Many thousands more were stored in boxes against the walls. The bodies of the butchered sentries were found on the stairs, where they had fallen in their effort to give the alarm.

TELLS OF GRIM PURPOSE.

Lieutenant Beck made his report to headquarters. It was a faithful account of what had happened. He made no effort to excuse himself, but said he would remain in the field until all the multitudes had been accounted for. Leaving the letter with the president to send by the next mail, and detailing the wounded men to remain behind the lieutenant started in the storm with a remnant of his garrison, his first leaving they hurried the door with all solemnity.

At sunrise the little band arrived at a Manobo settlement. His men drew back, timidly. To them the Manobos were the wild head hunters of their childhood, the men who had been killed at their door. Lieutenant Beck hurriedly entered the town, followed cautiously by his men, and knocked at the most pretentious of the rude grass huts, the home of the headman of the village.

A stalwart chief appeared at the door, then quickly withdrew in sudden suspicion as he recognized the uniform of the officer of the law—a law which he held in contempt. Without thought of peril Lieutenant Beck quietly but firmly forced his way inside the house, beckoning his men to follow. The chief stood against the far wall, his great knife held menacingly, while his women scurried to the far end of the half darkened room.

Lieutenant Beck made the sign of peace, placing his hands over his head and calling one of his men forward to interpret. The chief lowered his knife the fire dying slowly out of his eyes and a look of almost superstitious wonder taking its place. Hurriedly the lieutenant told of his quest and asked the headman's aid. He explained all his doings upon the way, and the chief entered the country as an ally, not a foe, and called upon the Manobo to join him in apprehending or wiping out of existence these murderers and traitors. He promised a reward from the powerful country over the sea to whom they all owed their first allegiance.

The old chief was visibly affected after Lieutenant Beck's words had been given him. He disclaimed the reward, but advanced and laid his sword at the lieutenant's feet, bowing his head.

A hasty meal was eaten, and reinforced with Manobo guides Lieutenant Beck plunged into the depths of the forest. Rumors were sent in all directions and the wild notes of the concha horn were sounded from the highest eminences to tell the forest people that the stranger was among them and must not be molested.

On the fourth day the pursuers caught up with the multitudes. A fight followed. The enemy was entrenched in natural surroundings, but Lieutenant Beck charged. The enemy retreated, leaving one of their number dead. Lieutenant Beck cut a notch on the handle of his revolver and led the way onward. A second dead body of a multitudes was found in the trail the next morning, pierced by an Aeta arrow. Another notch appeared on the handle of the leader's revolver.

There were now but five of the multitudes. Lieutenant Beck's force had not fared much better. Two of his men were wounded and could barely limp along the trail. The officer took their rifles, telling the men to follow the next stream until it reached the sea.

A whole week went by without the retreating men again being seen. May after man of the eight remaining with Lieutenant Beck fell out, weak and exhausted. The food was neither nourishing nor palatable; great sores appeared on their bodies; dread dysentery appeared. At last only four men were left, and that day they surprised the enemy, led to an ambush through information brought to their guides by an Aeta. Lieutenant Beck cut three more notches on his revolver handle.

END OF HIS QUEST.

The enemy was again encountered. One more was shot by Lieutenant Beck as he charged desperately. There were now six notches on the handle of the officer's revolver.

The Manobo guides refused to go further. The last of Lieutenant Beck's men was too feeble to travel further. The officer sat on the side of the trail and cried in his bodily weakness. The sergeant, the last and most important of the multitudes was yet to be accounted for. Even in his deplorable condition Lieutenant Beck did not give a thought to turning back.

The Manobos shook their heads as he thanked them ineffectively for their loyalty. He plunged forward, and blindly. He found more food at the springs, but he was too weak to eat. At last, too feeble to stand, he was crawling on all fours like an animal. His reason was deserting him, yet his stern purpose forced his tired body onward, though he scarcely understood his quest.

Animal cunning took the place of the mind vacated. At the slightest noise the lieutenant would drop down close to the earth. His eyesight began to fail, and he would awake after hours of unconsciousness to find he had pitched head first from a height which at other times would have brought his end.

At one of the springs, hidden away in a profusion of fern and moss, he was aware of the presence of an enemy, he knew not how. He lay concealed for hours, crawling nearer and nearer. His revolver lay in his holster, but he gave it no thought. He had lost the knowledge of its use. There before him was a man. He lay beside the spring, unconscious of Lieutenant Beck's nearness until the officer was so close that he put out his hand and touched his quarry. Then the man turned and laughed, weakly and nervously in the lieutenant's face. The white man returned the laugh vacantly. The two faces sat silently on the brink of the spring, gazing at each other with unblinking eyes. Each knew that the other was an enemy. Then began a tireless watch. Every movement both guarded; each was too weak to take the offensive.

The sergeant was unarmed and his eyes were ever directed to the revolver. Lieutenant Beck carefully disengaged. The day drew to a close. Lieutenant Beck's eyes were heavy with weakness, while the sergeant's grew brighter with expectancy. He edged nearer as the white man's body flattened along the ground. The native's hand stole stealthily across the back of his enemy. He tried to raise the tip of the holster, but the strength remaining in his fingers was not sufficient to undisturb it. A sudden pain in his back followed a mysterious whirling sound, and the sergeant, uttering a sharp cry of suffering, withdrew cowering from the sleeping lieutenant. The sun was low in the sky and the forest was enshrouded in gloom when Lieutenant Beck awoke. He saw his enemy shivering and gasping near him. He watched, laughing with childish ease of the fight. Then the sun sank and light settled over the forest.

Captain Winthrop had returned unexpectedly, bringing with him reinforcements from Manila, where he had heard rumors of the mutiny; news that had traveled in that mysterious way so common and yet inexplicable among the savage tribes. He had received Lieutenant Beck's report and had forwarded it to Manila and was just on the point of going in search of his lieutenant. As he sat on his porch gazing sadly across the plaza Captain Winthrop saw a group of half clad men surrounded by soldiers walking slowly toward him. As they approached he made out a litter carried on the shoulders of the strangers.

Several of Lieutenant Beck's men had been brought in half dead by the natives of the mountains, a hitherto unheard of proceeding, but this litter was being carried straight to his door. Half expecting what it bore, Captain Winthrop rose hurriedly to meet them. He recognized the old Manobo chief in the lead. The roughly built litter was placed on the grass in his yard and the officer drew back in horror as he caught sight of the form lying within.

Lieutenant Beck tried to speak, but in his weakness and with the joy of return his tongue refused. He drew his revolver from his holster and pointed a quivering finger at the grim notches cut in its handle, then raised the trembling finger toward a ghastly trophy hung upon a spear carried by a Manobo before him.

Captain Winthrop gave an involuntary shudder as he recognized the head and torso of the rebel sergeant, an Aeta arrow of his sticking out from behind his shoulders.

MRS. ROOT DISCOVERS

A NEW TEA

Mrs. Eltha Root, who became familiar with the products of South America during her long sojourn in that country, has found a beverage called Parakayan tea. It is a delightful, either hot or cold, and with no doubt grows in favor as it becomes known. This tea is made from the smoke-dried leaves of a tree called yaba mate, a cross between an evergreen and a holly tree. The leaves contain resin, essential oil, with a small quantity both of caffeine and tannin, so that they contain the properties both of tea and coffee, but in such proportion that they are not the least deleterious. With lemon and sugar, it makes a drink as stimulating and grateful to the taste as ordinary tea, and with cream and a touch of brandy or rum it will satisfy the most fervent boulevardier in lieu of coffee.—New York Press.

HOW GERMS SPREAD SKIN DISEASE

Eczema, Psoriasis and other skin troubles are caused by myriads of germs at work in the skin. Unless these germs are promptly destroyed they rapidly multiply, unawares they way keep into the sensitive tissue. This is what causes that awful itch, and which becomes a mere rash may grow into a cancerous growth, and a tormenting skin disease with its years of misery.

Don't take any chances! Destroy the germs at the beginning of the trouble with that soothing and cleansing wash, the D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema.

THE POLO COAT

I don't want my mouth nor nose open when she's the stream of my flat. When my heart and pulse and hope, I find a white rabbit on her lip. (Medusa wore worse things than that.)

In times of strife and remote, I shall not leave my habitat. Until she buys a polo coat. What time, upon a ten-foot rope, she swings a handbag, small and fat, I will not let her go to the grape. For only to buy that jacket. I never even caused a spot. By feasting on the things she'd eat. And even now I shall not quit. Until she buys a polo coat. Oh, dress thing in fashion's doped. Oh, lamb of Bonny—square and flat.

Will I endure you near me?—nope. Nor impress nor aristocrat. Could capture me where you are at. Let Indian ladies on blankets date. Why should mine hand the weepy chat.

Until she buys a polo coat? Has polo all these fads begat? A pony coat was last year's note. And now she's hopeless—having that—Until she buys a polo coat.—Chester Phillips, in the New York American.

Proven Orange Lands

On Terms That You Can Meet

We have 1500 acres of the best thoroughly proven orange land in the state. Adjoining it on all sides are bearing orchards and vineyards—conclusive proof of the value of this land for growing citrus fruits. It is only 20 miles from Fresno, one mile from the town of Minkler on the Santa Fe. There are good schools near at hand and one of the main County Highways passes through this tract. This land is being subdivided and sold in small tracts on easy terms. You can buy this land for 1-3 down; no more payments to be made for four years. This gives you an opportunity to improve it and make it salable at a large increase in value before it becomes necessary to make further payments.

When one considers that four year old orange orchards are worth from $750 to $1200 an acre, the profits that may be realized can readily be seen. Those who buy now will reap these profits; those who come later must pay them if they buy this land.

Experienced Orchardists Say

I have thoroughly examined this land and consider it first-class in every respect. The foothills of Fresno County hold a great future for the citrus fruit industry and will bring great prosperity to the county.

Wylie M. Giffin

(Mr. Giffin is president of the Fresno County Chamber of Commerce and a successful orchardist and vineyardist.)

I have thoroughly investigated the Wahtoke Thermal Tract and find it thoroughly adapted to the growing of lemons and oranges, and can unhesitatingly recommend this land for this purpose. The soil is very strong and of the same character as that in the best orchards.

A. G. Schultz

(Mr. Schultz is a successful orange grower of 20 years' experience and Horticultural Commissioner of Tulare County.)

Dependable Water Supply

We have the best water system in the valley. A 130 horse power pumping plant draws water from the inexhaustible supply held in the gravel beds of the Kings river bottoms. More than 3 miles of concrete and steel pipes have been laid to distribute this water without waste to the orchards. THIS WATER SYSTEM DOES NOT COST OWNERS OF LAND IN THIS TRACT A CENT. The entire expense is borne by the Wahtoke Land Company.

If each individual had to install a system the expense would be at a conservative estimate, about $1,000 to each ten acre tract. This is an important fact to bear in mind when buying orange land.

A Special Proposition

We Will Plant and Care for Your Land

This is the offer we make you to render it possible for you to buy this land without having to live on it before the orchard comes into bearing. We will plant it for you, cultivate and irrigate, and give it the best of care generally and the cost to you will be only $40 a month. This gives you the benefit of expert care by experienced men and removes a great deal of care and worry from you.

THE GERM WHICH PRODUCES DANDRUFF

Finally Causes Baldness; Kill the Germ and Save Your Hair; Newbro's Herpicide Will Do It.

Did you ever try to discover a reason for the falling of a valuable plant? You perhaps found that life was destroyed by some insect or parasite working about the roots and sapping away the elements which go to support plant life.

The dandruff germ exercises the same destructive influence upon the life of the hair. It forces its way down the follicle around the hair bulb and thus prevents the hair from getting proper nourishment. The hair then drops out.

Newbro's Herpicide prevents this by killing the germ. It also frees the scalp from the accumulations of dirt and sebum. With the removal of these obstacles to clean, healthy scalp, the hair will grow naturally and luxuriantly.

Herpicide is known as the Original Dandruff Germ Destroyer. One dollar size bottles are sold and guaranteed by all druggists. Applications may be obtained at the best barber shops and hair dressing parlors.

Send 10c in postage or silver to The Herpicide Co., Dept. B, Detroit, Mich., for a nice sample of Herpicide and a booklet telling all about the hair.

WANT FARMERS' UNION PUT ON FIRM FOOTING

Five Members Meet Here and Discuss Matter; Called By Fred Abbott.

Five members of the Fresno County Farmers' Union met yesterday afternoon at the Chamber of Commerce to consider work to increase the operations of the Farmers' Union in this county. The meeting was largely to do with the work of the California Farmers' Union Inc. and other incorporated branches of the organization. Some talk of forming another organization was had but it was decided to work to increase the operations of the present plants, which have been built at great cost. That the interests of the Farmers' Union could best be served by getting out and establishing branches on firm ground, was the general opinion expressed. The meeting was called by President Fred Abbott of the Fresno County Farmers' Union. The others present were H. W. Wrightson, H. G. Johnson, W. T. Mulling and Hans Kurror of Sanger.

CLEARING HOUSE TO MEET MONDAY

A meeting of the Fresno Clearing House Association will be held on Monday to consider the report of the committee appointed to recommend some plan for financing the Fresno, Coalinga and Monterey railroad. Announcement to this effect was made yesterday by O. J. Woodward. The committee was chosen by President Coffin of the Chamber of Commerce at a meeting called several weeks ago at the request of the Fresno Clearing House Association. For this reason the Clearing House Association will consider the report.

DOG REARS LION CUBS.

There is one dog in Chicago that will feel at home in the African jungles. If her master ever decides to take her there, she is at present engaged in rearing two lion cubs in full-grown lionhood. They were born recently at Lincoln Park, but the lioness flatly refused to nurse her offspring. The lion babies pitifully proclaimed the fact that they were hungry. Finally Devry learned of Lady Slopes, a Boston lady, whose eight puppies were drowned. The lion babies were taken to the lion house, and, after a preliminary sniff or two, she wagged her tail approvingly. The cubs ceased to whine, and twenty minutes later they had forgotten that such a thing as hunger ever existed. Chicago Dispatch to New York World.

VINE EXPERT IS TO GIVE LECTURE HERE

Professor George Husmann to Speak on "Mission of the Vine."

Professor George Husmann of the bureau of plant industry, Department of Agriculture, will deliver a lecture in Fresno on Thursday, November 2, on "The Mission of the Vine." The lecture will be illustrated with stereopticon views. The place has not yet been selected but will be announced later. In the course of his lecture Professor Husmann says he will introduce a number of features in grape growing which heretofore have not been known by the grape growers of the San Joaquin Valley. He has a large collection of views by which he is able to illustrate every point he makes. A great deal of interest has been manifested in the coming of the government expert and from all indications there will be a large gathering of grape growers when he appears here.

Rose Stahl, the inimitable "Maggie Pepper," of Broadway fame, can prove an ally for George Washington that exonerates him from being the "first man." Here's the story: "A teacher said to her class: 'Who was the first man?' 'George Washington,' a little boy shouted promptly. 'How do you make out that George Washington was the first man?' said the teacher, smiling indulgently. 'Because,' said the little boy, 'he was first in war, first peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen.' 'But at this point a larger boy held up his hand. 'Well,' said the teacher to him, 'who do you think was the first man?' 'I don't know what his name was,' said the larger boy, 'but I know it wasn't George Washington, ma'am, because the history books says George Washington married a widow, so of course there must have been a man ahead of him.'—November Young's Magazine.

FRESNO POULTRY SHOW JUDGES ARE SELECTED

Place Is Not Yet Chosen;
Premium List Out November 10th.

A short meeting of the Fresno Poultry Fanciers' Association was held in Judge Smith's court room on Friday night to consider further arrangements for the poultry show to be held in this city from October 11th to 16th. The show place has not been selected, but it is expected that this will be chosen the early part of next month. At the meeting Friday, judges for the show were chosen. Robert Venn will judge the American and English classes. David Larson of Turlock will judge the Mediterranean classes, and A. J. Leitch will judge the miscellaneous classes. The premium list for the show is now in the course of preparation and will be out on November 10th. Cup, cash and ribbon premiums are to be given.

LARGEST WOMAN ON EARTH.

Miss Gertrude Burk, of Chicago, largest woman in the world, is visiting at the home of Mrs. H. W. Hynes here. Miss Burk is 22 years of age, weighs 825 pounds, stands 5 feet 10 inches, and some of her measurements are: Arm, 28 inches; waist, 54; bust, 75. She wears No. 41-2 shoes and No. 7 gloves. When she was born Miss Burk weighed 15 pounds, and at 8 years of age weighed 250. At the Hynes home she sits on two chairs placed facing each other. Miss Burk goes through doors by turning sideways, and it is a pretty hard squeeze at that. Efforts have been made by show men to get Miss Burk to exhibit herself, but she has never been tempted. Her parents left her an estate, and she does not need the money.—Alton (Ill.) Dispatch to New York World.

DIRECTORS OVERRULE SEPARATOR PROTEST

Award of Judge Sustained;
Gas Engine Protests
Are Laid Over.

The judges' awards for cream separators at the county fair were sustained yesterday by the directors of the Fresno County Agricultural Association after a lengthy hearing. The gas engine protests were laid over because of the failure of the judges to put in their appearance. The protest meeting was very lively at times, charges and counter-charges being made, but the decision of the directors was to the effect that as M. G. Smith, the judge, had, in their opinion, made awards to the best of his ability and without bias, his decisions be sustained. The protestant in the cream separator case was the De Laval Creamery Company of San Francisco. The premiums for best display and best demonstration were awarded to the Fresno Creamery Company. The representatives of the gas engine companies who are protesting against the awards made the Morton Gas Engine Company and the Fresno Agricultural Works, were present at the meeting, and the matter was discussed informally, but no action taken. No date for a hearing was set. G. T. Willis was the gas engine judge.

HOW BIG IS A DIK-DIK?

This question in Natural History is worrying St. Louis these days. The office of W. N. McMillan, of South Africa, to donate to the St. Louis zoo, a dik-dik has started a query among St. Louisans as to just what sort of an animal it is. Since Mr. McMillan's offer to Park Commissioner Davis last Sunday thousands have asked about the animal, but few could give a description. Mr. McMillan departed on his return to Africa ignorant of the future he had created. While the animal has been known to South African residents for many years, its public prominence dates from the famous hunting expedition of Theodore Roosevelt, with whom Mr. McMillan was associated. Among city officials the advisability of bringing a dik-dik to St. Louis has been much questioned. Acting Mayor Gundlach, however, is willing to take a chance. "I don't know what a dik-dik is," he said; "but if it is rare, curious, and worth looking at, St. Louis ought to have one." Comptroller Tausig was a little more conservative, inasmuch as the city would have to pay for transporting the animal here from South Africa. "How big is it?" he asked. Park Commissioner Davis already has gone on record in favor of the dik. He declares it is the least thing St. Louis could do toward starting a first-class zoo. He yesterday received a black "Teddy" bear from Wisconsin, which will be added to the Forest park menagerie. Speaker Lawton says: "The city would better get money enough to haul the ashes first before it gets a dik-dik. If Mr. McMillan wants St. Louis to have a dik-dik, let him prepay the freight on his present." The Republic requested the public library yesterday to furnish information on the identity of a dik-dik. None of the assistants ever heard of the animal, and it required two hours to find a description. This is what the South Africa animal-book said about the dik-dik. "This curious little antelope, which constitutes a very well-defined species of the general group of the Neotraginae, is distinguished by its elongated muzzle, which is almost covered with hair, and the presence of a tuft of long hair on the crown of its head. The tail is so short as to be almost rudimentary and the lateral hoofs are minute. The horns vary from half to three-quarters of the length of the skull, and are straight or slightly curved with strong basal ribs. All of the species are delicate and of slender build, with soft silky hair. The dik-dik is less than 20 inches in height, hides in the undergrowth of South Africa, and is extremely hard to catch." It is but little larger than a hare. Which in the opinion of local zoologists does not preclude the possibility of St. Louis having one. Just a handful of postage stamps would pay its procreator and passage aboard ship.—St. Louis Republic.

A FABLE
A plumping pebble lay beside
An acorn in a field.
The pebble was possessed of pride
That never was concealed;
To more explicitly explain,
It viewed the acorn with disdain.

"I'm white and smooth," the pebble said,
"I glisten in the sun."
Your color is a drab red,
Your day will soon be done;
For ages I have dazzled here;
You soon shall rot and disappear."

The pebble, boasting day by day,
Its neighbor viewed with scorn;
A season slowly wore away,
And then a great was born;
The pebble, lying close at hand,
Looked on and did not understand.

Year after year the sapling grew,
The pebble's neighbor spread a row
His leaves above the pebble now
And shaded it with green;
Deep in the soil concealed, at last,
The pebble's foolish pride was past.

MORAL
Those whom you treat with scorn may grow.
Develop, and expand;
There is so much you do not know
And cannot understand;
We may be slow, when we decay,
But overshadowed by and by.

WILL BE COSTLY.
If ever a European nation had grave and weighty reasons for coming war with Turkey at the present time, it was Italy. She does a large and profitable trade with the Turkish empire, which will now be cut off with a single blow. Her banks are ruined, her commerce in Turkish finance, public and industrial, through her state banks, is paralyzed. It is a very gloomy picture of the joint stock companies in operation there. During the month of September of 300 companies which reported to their shareholders no fewer than 100 suffered such heavy losses as to call for a drastic withdrawal of their capital.—London Mail.

LOTS SELL FAST

Shrewd Investors Are Seizing This Opportunity

Lots are selling rapidly in Calwa. People who are on the lookout for building lots that combine desirable homesite with good investment are taking advantage of the opportunity that is open at Calwa. The increase in sales of these lots we attribute to the fact that people have investigated the unusual prospects at Calwa and the investigation has proven the truth of every assertion we make.

Why These Lots Are Being Taken

There are good reasons why these lots are selling rapidly. The Santa Fe is spending $1,000,000 in making Calwa a modern railroad town. There will be a great number of cheap employees and tradesmen who will make Calwa their headquarters. This means a good population of well paid men in this new town at an early date. It opens many business opportunities. Hotels, restaurants, barber shops, stores, all sorts of business houses will be needed.

The people who come to Calwa to live will want houses to live in. Rents will be high. Many of them will buy and build. Those who buy lots now will be able to sell at an increase.

Now is the time to buy.

A Big Demand For Lots

There is a big demand for lots in the Wilson and Alhambra Tracts. They are in the part of town that is most exclusive and where the greatest building activity is being experienced. The locating of the new State Normal School in this section of the city has placed the stamp of public approval on it and stimulated the demand for these highly desirable lots. The unquestioned desirability of these tracts impresses itself on all beholders.

Wilson and Alhambra Tracts

A car line with service every ten minutes extends to the center of the Wilson and Alhambra Tracts. This feature makes these lots coveted by those whose business takes them to the business section. All modern improvement are either already installed or will be very shortly. These include graded and curbed streets, sewers, water and gas, telephones and electric lights. Those who build in the Wilson and Alhambra Tracts can erect the most modern houses.

There are building restrictions that assure homes of the better type only will be built. These tracts are right in the path of the greatest growth of Fresno.

Joe Rivers Beats Kirkwood in Eight Rounds

JOE RIVERS COMES BACK AND WINS HANDILY

Los Angeles Boy Defeats George Kirkwood in 8 Fast Rounds.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 28.—Joe Rivers, the Los Angeles featherweight, whose championship aspirations received a temporary setback recently at the hands of Johnny Kilbane, "came back" in decisive fashion at Vernon this afternoon, defeating George Kirkwood, the St. Louis boxer, in the eighth round of their scheduled 20-round bout.

Referee Chas. Eytan stopped the fight to save Kirkwood from further injury, after Rivers had beaten him into semi-consciousness. It was apparent that Kirkwood had no chance to win and Rivers will get the credit for a knockout. Although Kirkwood displayed remarkable gameness, he was outclassed and the fight was little more than an exercise gallop for the local boy, who had a decided advantage in every round.

POPULATION OF CHINA.

"Advises Received" Show It to Be About 426,000,000.

Chinese politicians, when they come to this country, do not use the fertile and picturesque imagination that pervades their literature. When Mr. C. S. Gunn, of the Young China Association, says that 400,000,000 of the 426,000,000 people in China are in sympathy with the movement of which the elusive Mr. Sun Yat Sen is the reputed leader, he puts a touch of statistical impartiality upon his figure by saying that "advises received show" them to be "probably correct."

The most trustworthy estimate of the population of the Chinese empire was made by one American minister, about five years ago, after careful study of all the data, official or other, that were available. He fixed the approximate total at 270,000,000. This estimate agreed substantially with that made about fifteen years since by French scientists connected with the government of Tonquin in the South. Chinese official estimates have been in the neighborhood of 100,000,000. Increase of some 50 per cent over the figures for which trustworthy support has been found by foreign investigators. The size of the population does not, however, affect the merits of the insurrectionary or reform movement. If that commands the active sympathy of even one-half the people of China, the Manch dynasty will be overthrown, though what may happen afterward would be rash to try to predict.—From the New York Times.

HARVARD'S GOAL LINE IS CROSSED BY BROWN IN SECOND HALF

CAMBRIDGE, Oct. 28.—Brown was no match for Harvard at football this afternoon for the score of 29 to 8 does not spell the full strength of the crimson offense. Yet Brown had the satisfaction of the first one to cross Harvard's goal line this season, a feat due to his perfect line forward passing. Excepting in the second period, when Brown scored, Harvard, however, was always master of the situation.

The last score came when Potter caught a thrown punch and ran sixty-three yards to the three-yard line. Wendell then carried the ball over, but Fisher failed at goal.

The last score came when Potter caught a thrown punch and ran sixty-three yards to the three-yard line. Wendell then carried the ball over, but Fisher failed at goal.

The purple and gold crew of pigskin chasers from the local high school were deeply enveloped in the wet blanket of defeat at Dinuba yesterday, when the end of a score of 18 to 0, the game, which was good and clean, was played in one fifteen and one twenty minute half. Fresno, though somewhat heavier than her opponent, was clearly outclassed from the first tip of the pong, and her backs didn't succeed in getting the ball past Dinuba's center at any time of the game. Dinuba scored five points during the first five minutes of play, by making a try, and a converted goal. In the last half, the winning team made two tries, two goals and a place kick, running up the final score of the struggle, 18 to 0.

The Fresno boys will not take the defeat to heart very much, since their defeat was due simply to lack of training and practice. Dinuba has been practicing the Rugby game for upwards of three weeks, as opposed to the five-day preparations of the local boys. There is a lot of excellent raw material on the college team, and a bit of hard training will serve to show it off to advantage.

MICHIGAN HAS A TOUGH TIME WITH 11 FROM VANDERBILT

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 28.—Giving the maize and blue one of the toughest battles they have ever known, the Michigan football team was defeated 11 to 8 by Vanderbilt today in a strategy contest, filled with thrilling flashes of individual brilliance.

Neither team counted in the first two quarters. Each scored a field in the third. In the final period each made a touch down, but while Michigan kicked goal, Vanderbilt failed to do so, thus losing the game.

A FEMINE MYSTERY.

It is a marvelous thing that while the scanty amount of materials in the humblest of these is a mystery, why the mills are employed little than half time, and operatives are suffering for lack of wages, costumes cost just as much as ever. The women who make their own clothes must have a good bit in buying records, but as a whole the clothing question is reported to be as serious as ever. Perhaps a congressional committee could find out something about this.—From the Philadelphia Record.

CALIFORNIA RUGBY MEN WIN AGAIN FROM STARS

British Columbia Athletes Play Fast in First But Lose, 24-0.

BERKELEY, Oct. 28.—The all-star rugby team from British Columbia went down to defeat today for the second time before the university of California varsity fifteen, today's score being 24 to 0. The score, however, is a poor indication of the game. In the first half the northerners pummeled the collegians in their own side of the field the entire time and the ball across the line three times. Each time a California back dropped upon it, saving the score, but the Britishers promptly brought the play back from the succeeding drop out.

California played the fiercest fighting game of the season, only superb defensive work stopping the visitors from rolling up a good score. In the second half California came back strongly and the dashing passing, rallies they inaugurated repeatedly carried the ball over the scoring line. The northern men fought for every inch, but they were rapidly worn out. California scored only five points in the first half, carrying the ball over with a spectacular passing bout with a minute of the time the game started. From then until half-time they were busy protecting their own goal.

KINGSBURG HI TOSSERS ARE BEATEN, 4 TO 1, BY SELMA HI

SELMA, Oct. 28.—The Selma high school boys defeated the Kingsburg team on the local diamond this afternoon by a score of 4 to 1. This is the second game of the season for the Selma boys. The local team lost the game with Easton two weeks ago, but today's game puts them back in line to contest for the local championship. The next game will be played against Fowler, high at that place, two weeks from today.

TURTLES ARE ANIMALS.

In holding Captain Cleveland H. Downs, of the Ward line steamer Surrogate, in $500 bail for the Court of Sessions, on a charge of cruelty to animals preferred by the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Magistrate Frechle handed down a decision determining for the first time in history, it is believed, the legal status of the turtle.

Captain Downs was charged with permitting the fins or flippers of sixty-five large green turtles, carried as freight on the Surrogate, to be pierced and tied to prevent the turtles from crawling over the sides of the ship. In an opinion of several thousand words, Magistrate Frechle decided that the turtle, within the law, is an animal; without the law, it is a reptile.

The last prosecution, in a case involving cruelty to turtles, it is declared, was as far back as 1878, when the same society instituted proceedings, but at that time the case was left undecided.—New York dispatch to the Philadelphia Record.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS

Isn't it surprising how far a fat woman can get? The wheel of fortune has turned many a man's head. He who swears that he will marry his chance for a fish dinner. The ring of friendship is less expensive than an engagement ring. When a man sings his own praise he seldom voices popular sentiment. A man can interest any woman by pretending to be interested in her. Ask any splinter why she never married and she will frankly admit that it wasn't because she never had an opportunity.—Chicago News.

"HOME RUN" BAKER MAY PLAY BENEFIT BALL IN THE SOUTH

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 28.—Frank Baker, the hard hitting third baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics, who rapped out two home runs, various and sundry singles during the recent series for the world's championship with the New York Giants, has been made an attractive offer to participate in ball games in this city in the near future for the benefit of the $100,000 fund for charity hospital. It has been planned to secure the services of the score or more professional ball players wintering in this city to compose two teams for a series of games. Baker has not yet replied to the offer.

STANFORD ROLLS UP BIG SCORE OVER CLUBMEN

Final Count Is 39 to 3; Full-back Brown Not in Big Game.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Oct. 28.—Stanford rolled up a score of 39 to 3 against the Olympic Club Rugby 15 today in a game that was played almost entirely by the forwards of the two teams. The only try registered by the clubmen was their last score, added Stanford since the club took up Rugby six years ago. It came in the second half, Peters of the back field men, carrying the ball over.

The collegians appeared to have recovered completely from their slump of a week ago when the University of Southern California held them to a close score. Brown, the veteran fullback, was out of the game through injuries. Hiding, a freshman, filling his place in workmanlike style. Templeton, another freshman, played a weak position usually occupied by Geisler. Brown's injuries may keep him out of the line up against California two weeks from today.

WALTER CAMP, JR., GETS BIG END OF SCORE FOR YALE 11

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 28.—Yale won an easy victory here today over Colgate eleven, 22 to 0. Walter Camp Jr., appeared in the Yale line up for the first time this season, playing a spectacular game, at half back, and featuring with smashing gains through the Colgate line.

The first period ended without a score as Yale's fumbles proved costly. In the second period, Camp ran around Colgate's right end for a touchdown, and six minutes later, aided by Strout, slipped around the same end for another score. New ends were used in this period by Yale, and Merritt's place filled earlier by Strout at quarter back.

Pake kicks from placement and shift formations were responsible for Yale's scoring in the third period. Relly carrying the ball over for the five points trailed in that period. At the beginning of the fourth period it was Yale's ball on the 22 yard line and Anderson threw a beautiful forward pass to Strout, who fell across the Colgate line for a touch down.

FORAKER FOR THE BENCH?

"The name of former Senator Foraker has not been mentioned among the likely candidates for the Supreme Court bench," said an Ohioan, "but it could not surprise anybody who knew a national politics twenty-five years ago to hear that President Taft had suggested the name of Senator Foraker to succeed the late Justice Harlan."

"Senator Foraker used to be a member of the superior court of Cincinnati at the time that Justice Harlan sat on the same bench. Foraker retired before Harlan, and just after the latter had resigned to become a member of an important law firm I was in the governor's company one day when he was talking about appointing Harlan's successor."

"I think young Bill Taft would be a good man," said the governor. "But his brother Charlie has been consistently knocking you in his paper, some one suggested."

SHE CLAIMS PARASOL FOUND IN SHARK.

Because her parasol dropped in New York harbor, swallowed by a shark and then carried to Delaware Breakwater, where the shark was captured by James Keyes, a light-vessel boatman, and the parasol cut from the stomach, is no reason that Miss Laura Dorsey, of Saugatuck, Conn., should give up hope of getting the parasol back, and, according to a letter from her, she has no idea of relinquishing her claim.

Keyes caught the shark some time ago, and was astonished when opening it to find a parasol as part of its supper diet. Miss Dorsey heard of the finding, and yesterday sent word of the loss of the parasol from the steamer Richard Peck in the East river. Although there is but little left of the original parasol, except the ribs and some of its cover and handle, it will be sent to her.—Lewes (Del.) dispatch to the New York World.

EXHIBITION GAME IS AUSTRALIANS BELIEVE THEY WILL RETAIN TENNIS CUP

Champion Bittels to Meet Crab Maul's Stars With Mark Gates in Box.

An exhibition game between Bill Budge's Bittels, champions of the City League, and a bunch of All-Stars, led by "Crab" Maul, will be pulled off this afternoon at Recreation Park. Manager Budge will have nearly his regular lineup, as follows: Luck (twos), C. Massey, P. Klein, lb; Luck, 2b; G. Smith, ss; Hemphill, 3b; Hill, cf; West, cf; Lewis, rf.

Captain Maul will try to take the measure of the champions with this array of talent: Barbour, cf; Gates, P; Maul, 1b; Charno, 2b; Wagner, 2b; Funk, ss; Stupp, cf; Corlew, cf; Truitt, rf. It will be noted that there are one or two changes in the lineup of the Bittels. This is due to the fact that two of Budge's star men went to Bakerfield yesterday morning to join Frank Dickinson's All-Stars in two games against Los Angeles. The absent ball players are Stanley and Walter Cartwright. Earl Preston and Grover Brandt. The last two mentioned are members of Roscoe Eddy's Tigers of the City League. The Bittels will not go to Madera today.

MORE BOXING IS HELD AT SMELTER ARENA IN MADERA

MADERA, Oct. 28.—There was a boxing bout at the smelter last night between Nick Franchi and Frank Crappa. The latter should have been named "Scraper," for he forced the fighting from the time the men entered the ring until the going sounded at the end of the last round. Franchi was kept busy defending himself, and by clever footwork, managed to stay five rounds. The referee called the bout a draw.

There were several one round bouts between ambitious pugilists, but none of them showed more promise than is to be found in the cigarette class.

Many a man is willing to admit that he doesn't know more because it isn't worth knowing.

THEY WILL RETAIN TENNIS CUP

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The make-up of the Australian team which will defend the world's tennis title against the American challengers is as follows according to advices from Melbourne: Norman Brooks, A. W. Dunlop and Rod Heath.

Brooks will be captain of the team and will have full charge of the defense. He will play with Dunlop in the doubles while he and Heath will defend the singles. The Australian tennis fans figure that Brooks will win both singles and with Dunlop, three wins out of five will keep the cup in Australia.

COYOTES CALL OFF TODAY'S GAME AT MADERA

Pitcher Browning of Seals Leaves Town; Bittels Remain at Home.

MADERA, Oct. 28.—The much talked of game which was to have been pulled off tomorrow between the Fresno Bittels and the Madera Coyotes, has been called off. Manager Preclude thinking that it was the lesser of the two evils to disappoint the public that way than to sting them with a poor game.

The defection of one of the men he had counted upon led him to this conclusion. Browning, who was to hit for the Wild Dogs, and on whose work the little moving depended to win the game, left suddenly. This would leave the Coyotes badly crippled for want of a pitcher, as the place could not be filled at short notice.

WISCONSIN IN FRONT

EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 28.—Wisconsin proved to strong for Northwestern here today, winning the game, 28 to 3. The Wisconsin team never was in danger, Northwestern's one field goal being the result of a rally in the fourth period. Follock of Wisconsin was the star of the game, making three touchdowns.

SPOKANE, Oct. 28.—Enraged, the horse owner which a well of scandal was woven Wednesday when Jockey Clifford Gilchrist, according to his own confession, was to have received $1500 for "pulling" was the sensation of the last day's program of the Alan race meet today, when he took the $1000
Idaho selling purse, the seven furlong sprint, by six lengths. The horse was piloted by Jockey Huxton and completely outdistanced his field.

they beat the Stars by a score of 17 to 7, after a lively battling contest.
"Right," Shuck warned the pitcher's box for the "Tigers" and the "Stars."

ST. MARY'S RUGBY TEAM DEFEATS PACIFICS; ONE INJURED

SAN JOSE, Oct. 28.—St. Mary's team of Oakland met the College of the Pacific fifteen this afternoon at College Park and defeated them by a score of 13 to 0. Franchi played throughout the second half and part of the first with his elbow out of joint. Inell also starred for the visitors, whose back line was impassable. Walton, the college fullback, saved many scores for his team.

A LADY CALLED HIM
Mr. Frank Hitchcock (bachelor), who is Postmaster General, and Mr.
John Barrett (bachelor), who is director general of the Pan-American Union, had a heart-to-heart tele-graphic conferance on the advantages and disadvantages of matrimony.

"By the way, Frank," said Mr. Barrett, "I suppose with you, as with me, every time you pay the slightest attention to a young woman you are immediately reported engaged or about to be married."

"Yes, John," said Mr. Hitchcock, gravely. "They naturally think that at last we have capitulated, and that our lonely bachelor existence is to end."
"They seem to know just how we feel about it, don't they?" said Mr.
Barrett. "You know I've been impressed with the fact that you and I have the same ideas on the subject. That's probably why we are both bachelors."

"But I just heard you were going to be married," ventured Mr. Hitchcock.
"I heard the same about you," answered Mr. Barrett. "There's nothing in it," was the dual answer. "I'm too busy to get married," said Mr. Hitchcock. "Same here," said Mr. Barrett.
"The reason you and I have remained bachelors so long."

But the conversation here was interrupted by a bell boy.
"Mr. Barrett," he said, "there's a body calling you on the telephone."

THE SAME OLD LUCK
"They tell me that every seven years your luck changes," said Henry Williams, alias Horace Jackson, when arraigned in general sessions, charged with burglary, second offense. Assistant District Attorney had suggested that Williams plead guilty.
"I'll stand trial," the prisoner insisted. "When I got out after my fifth term I was 30. Now I'm 37. I guess the jury will acquit me."
It took the jury only two minutes to return a verdict of guilty.
"Ten years in State prison," said Judge Crain.

"Something wrong with that seven-year luck theory," said Mr. Stryker.
"Guess you're right," admitted Williams. "Next time I get out I'll take no such chances.—From the New York

BAKER AT THE BAT

You have heard of mighty Casey and the famous Mudville nine.
How the hero of the diamond in a crisis was a "shiner".
How with bat in hand he heard the fans a mighty greeting shout.
And heard the umpire call two strikes,
and how he then fanned out.
Well, that was not a circumstance to what took place of late Right here on our own Polo grounds;
oh, sad and cruel fate!
When the famous Ath-a-jetics faced the Gints' great pitcher "Matt".
Oh, would it had been Casey and not
Baker at the bat!

Eight short innings had been finished and the game was closely fought.
But the Gints had the advantage with a score of one to naught.
And although the Ath-a-jetics on the second before had won had won When this same greaser Baker hit the pill for a home run.
Why, that was off of "Rube," who put one square across the plate
And would not happen to a man like Mathewson the great.
The score was one to nothing, he would hold them down to that.
Such was the "dope" of all home fans
when Baker went to bat.

There was ease in Matt's manner and a smile upon his face
As he wound him up an inward curve no batting eye could trace.
When "Zam!" a ball went sailing by
as if out of a gun,
A through express that made no stops
this side of old Home Run.

Somewhere the sun is shining, somewhere the crowds are gay, Somewhere the bands are playing—in the "Eldorado."
Down in the Quaker City there's jollity and fun.
But here it's just like Medville since Baker's great home run.

World.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 28.—Minnesota

Iowans held the Gophers even during the first quarter, but the effort seemed to wear them out, and Minnesota scored four touchdowns and as many goals.

HIS WANDERINGS UNLUCKY

American's Travels Abroad Cost Him
His Money and One Arm
Somebody on the American liner St.
Paul called the reporters aside when the vessel was boarded at quarantine and advised them to go into the steerage.

"There is a fellow down there with a history," said the stranger. "You who are always looking for tales of the sea will find a little volume when you run across John Dillon."

In the steerage, the news hunters found a weatherbeaten man with out-arm who said he was Mr. Dillon of Portland, Ore., fighter and adventurer, who had "been up against it more'n a year." He denied any intention of publishing his story in book form.
This is the substance of it:

The young man left Portland in the early part of 1910, traveling with a medicine show and "criminal company." There had been rough sledding until the show reached New Orleans, and there it went to pieces. The steamship Estonia was ready to start for England when Dillon found her,
and he signed as a coal trimmer.

In England he went aboard the Norwegian bark Bary, bound for Lisbon.
He liked Lisbon, and had about decided to make it his home, when one night, as he was strolling down one of the dark streets he felt a blow upon his head. He remembered nothing for two days, and when he awoke he confusedly found that he was in a hospital and that an arm had been amputated. The harbor master of Lisbon told the authorities that he had found Dillon, bleeding and unconscious, by the side of a railroad track, with his pockets turned inside out.

It was Dillon who went to Cardiff, Wales, and later the American Consul at Southampton sent him home on the St. Paul. The passengers subscribed enough money to take the wanderer to his home in Oregon.
Two other Americans who had been afflicted with wanderlust returned on the St. Paul.—From the New York Tribune.

THE CHARMING PALISADES.
The Palisades are slowly changing.
To the traveler of 100 years ago they were a sheer cliff of clean rock rising in a perpendicular line from the water's edge nearly 1,000 feet. Now they are buttressed at the foot by immense deposits of broken rock which fruits have peeled from the cliff.
Gradually this buttress is growing higher. The upward growth of this supporting pile is due to the tearing overrun of various kinds—which have grown seemingly right out of the rocks.—New York Sun.

THE MEANEST MAN.
Prof. John Dewey of Columbia was talking about a legislator who had tripped a traitor in the suffrage cause.
"A man who could be so mean to a woman," he said, "must be the original of the Clayton fall story. A convict in the Clayton fall, you know, managed to do a little flirting over the wall. He flirted for some weeks with a girl who milked the cows in a field adjoining the fall, and one evening he called to her,
and they struck up a conversation.
Every day after that, for a year or more, the girl came to the wall. Then the convict, getting tired of her, told her it was no use waiting for him, as he was in for life."—From the Chicago News.

TIGERS FROM PRINCETON DEFEAT HOLY CROSS, TWENTY TO NIX

PRINCETON, Oct. 28.—Long end runs on side kicks and the forward pass enabled Princeton to defeat Holy Cross today, 20 to 0. However, the Worcester eleven tore up the Princeton line as no other team has this season.

In the last quarter Princeton broke up and almost entirely through the individual running of Right Half Back Fendleton two touchdowns were recorded.

The other scoring came in the first two periods on a drop kick from the 30 yard line by Baker and a touch down by Dewitt.

BOXING GAME IS DEAD IN NEW YORK STATE, LATEST REPORT

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Despite the encouragement given to boxing in this state by the new Prawley law, the New York boxing clubs are not doing very well financially. Originally bouts have failed to draw the expected gate receipts even at low prices, and the promoters find it hard to secure attractive bouts, partly for the reason that boxers demand too much money for their services.

THE USEFUL VERB "TO GET."
There is no word, long or short, in the English language capable of performing so much labor in a clear, intelligible sense as the verb to get; and here is an old-time specimen of its capabilities:

"I got on horseback within ten minutes after I got your letter. When I got to Canterbury I got a chair for town; but I got wet through before I got to Canterbury, and I have got such cold as I shall not be able to get rid of in a hurry. I got to the treasury about noon, but first of all I got shaved and dressed. I soon got into the secret of getting a memorial before the board, but could not get an answer then; however, I got intelligence from the messenger that I should most likely get one the next morning. As soon as I got back to my inn I got my supper. When I got up in the morning, I got my breakfast and then got myself dressed, that I might get out in time to get an answer to my memorial. As soon as I got it I got into the first chair, and got to Canterbury by 3 o'clock, and about tea time I got home."—

"RAINMAKER" HATFIELD ENROUTE TO FARMS OF WEST SIDE

Carries Seventh Annual Contract; Must Produce at Least 10 Inches.

Fifty Thousand Acres Have Been Signed Up Near Crows Landing.

Charles M. Hatfield, known as the "Rainmaker," stopped off in Fresno last night en route from Los Angeles to Crows Landing on the West Side. Hatfield carries to his pocket his seventh annual moisture-cooking contract with the land owners of Stanislaus and Merced counties. Before leaving his home in Los Angeles, he received a telegram from a Mr. Oldenhouse of Crows Landing, informing him that 50,000 acres had been signed up for the coming winter and spring. Oldenhouse is one of the wealthy ranchers of the West Side country.

Hatfield's seventh annual contract calls for not less than ten inches of rainfall from November 1st to May 1st. The normal precipitation during these months is six and a half inches, according to Hatfield. However, the "rainmaker" says he can increase the amount to more than ten inches by his chemical methods. Last year, during the same period, the rainfall on the West Side was 13.51 inches.

His territory extends from Volta on the south to Wesley on the north and includes Newman, Crows Landing and Goshute. Headquarters will be established at Crows Landing about the 1st of the month. Hatfield says he will start his artificial production of rain on the 3rd or 4th and hopes to induce the clouds to gather and spend the moisture as soon as possible after the construction of his rain towers.

Last year he had his headquarters at Newman. The new contract covers practically the same territory with an

BUSINESS MEN VISIT RAILROAD STOCKADE

Ten Carpenters Working on Three New Houses Behind Board Fence.

A party of local business men yesterday visited the Southern Pacific yards, stockade, roundhouse and car shops at the invitation of Assistant Superintendent Dadds. In the party were O. J. Woodward, C. S. Pierce and Roy Pulliam. With Dadds acting as the guide, the party was taken to every section of the yards and the trip lasted two hours. During the trip, the business men were taken past more than a score of guards who are on duty from the depot to the upper yards.

Members of the party expressed surprise at the amount of work performed in the yards, shops, roundhouse and stockade. A force of ten carpenters was working on three houses within the stockade. Two of these are 20 by 60 feet and are to be used as sleeping quarters for the new men. The houses are well constructed, windows being provided every ten feet on both sides. A bath house is also being constructed with hot and cold shower and tub baths.

Early in the week, the yards were inspected by William Shaw, ex-chief of police, who remarked that he found everything in a sanitary condition. According to Assistant Superintendent Dadds the number of new men remain around ninety, which gives the Southern Pacific practically the same working force as before the strike began.

Additional acreage signed up. Evidently the West Side farmers have faith in Hatfield's claim that he can insure big crops by the artificial production of rain as they have just signed their seventh successive contract. In the past, the "rainmaker" has made good and believes he can do so again.

This is his fourteenth contract west of the Rocky mountains and has been signed by the farmers of Los Angeles, Nevada City and Sherman county, Oregon. He returned to these places two or three times, but his record of seven consecutive seasons in Stanislaus and Merced counties has never been equaled. In 1906, Hatfield went into the Klamath and brought rainfall for the placer miners, the increase being 500 per cent.

At the Fulton hotel last night, the "rainmaker" discussed his plans for the coming season. He said he believed his chemicals would fulfill every promise made to the West Side farmers and he is confident of exceeding the promised ten inches without any trouble. Hatfield says the crops cannot fail after his rain towers have been erected and the chemicals put to work. Last year his contract for the same territory ran from November 29 to May 1. The rainfall was over thirteen inches.

MYSTERIOUS STRANGER REFUSES TO CONVERSE WITH DEPUTY SHERIFFS

Still Maintains Complete Silence; Authorities Are Puzzled.

"Bugs Mendota," Mysterious Individual

"Bugs Mendota," the mysterious individual who is being held at the insane ward at the county jail, yesterday refused to talk and wouldn't even say "I don't know," which is his only reply to all questions. The man spent the entire day lying on his cot and only arose when his meals were brought to him. He eats heartily and handles his knife and fork with as much care as a refined gentleman in a banquet room. As time passes by the authorities are becoming more mystified, but are more deeply interested in the man.

They have not lost patience with him for his refusal to make known his identity, but are quietly waiting for him either to regain his lost senses or until such time he is willing to make known his name, whence he came and where he has been for the last few months or years. The majority of the officers are under the impression that the man is intentionally withholding his identity with some object in view. Others are of the opinion that he has lived the life of a hermit until he has lost his reason.

Deputy Henderson, who is in charge of the insane prisoners, says that the man is a complete mystery to him. He says that the man does not talk to himself as often times the demented do who refuse to talk in the presence of other people.

The man is perfectly harmless and peacefully submits to being searched and moved from one cell to another. He understands when he is told to stand up and sit down. He calmly walked from his cell to the side of the jail and allowed the photographer to take a picture of him. His only act of violence, if it could be termed violent, was in taking a "chew" of tobacco from his mouth and throwing it at the picture man after he had been snapped. The officers still have hopes of inducing him to talk and he will be held at the jail until it is learned for certain that he won't talk or that he is demented.

CORONER'S JURY FAILS TO FIX BLAME FOR CHILD'S DEATH

Hughes Hotel Management Is Neither Exonerated or Censured.

Body of Rae Haley Is Taken Back to Toronto, Canada, By Parents.

Contrary to general expectations after the manner in which the jurors summoned to hear testimony at the request of Mrs. Burton Haley, the four-year-old youth who met his death at the Hughes hotel Friday night when he fell down the elevator shaft, the coroner's jury after deliberating for over an hour rendered a verdict simply stating that the child came to his death but neither fixed the blame nor exonerated the hotel management.

It is understood the jurors were divided on the question but the majority were in favor of rendering a verdict stating the cause of death but not censuring or exonerating any one. The wording of the verdict was a surprise to all as it was supposed that the jurors would fix the blame.

Accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Haley, the little body was last night placed on board the south-bound Southern Pacific train and started for the family home in Toronto, Canada. The burial will take place there. This brings to an end a pleasure and business trip which Mr. and Mrs. Haley had planned to spend in California. Mrs. Haley is heart-broken from the death of her child and she didn't leave the Burnett sanitarium from the time of the demise until last night when she went to the Southern Pacific depot.

ATTORNEY ON HAND.

The father of the child, Frank Kunkle at the inquiry yesterday makes much stronger the rumor that the Western Hotel company will be made the defendant in a large damage suit for the death of the child. Attorney Kunkle took no part in the inquiry but merely listened to every word of the testimony. Attorney Kunkle, who yesterday afternoon stated that he didn't know whether Mr. Haley intended to start suit against the hotel management, remarked that he had been consulted by Mr. Haley but that it was not at his request that he was present at the inquiry yesterday morning. Kunkle said that he merely wished to be familiar with the testimony given by the witnesses.

FATHER GIVES EVIDENCE.

The father of the child was the first witness called to the stand by Coroner William Bean. Haley in a low, even tone told of his visit to Fresno with the expectation of later going to Clovis on business. He stated that after his arrival in this city he took his wife and son to the Hughes hotel, where they were assigned to a room on the third floor. Haley stated that he had been in the lobby of the hotel after a time table and returned to his room to wait for his wife to dress for dinner.

Haley then told of his little son running ahead of him and his wife and attempting to ring the bell at the elevator. "My son ran into the elevator first, then my wife and I followed," said Haley in his testimony. "As soon as I got in I turned around to face the door as I usually do, as I never thought but what it was a complete cage. I had no more turned around before my wife screamed and said 'Ben' and fallen through. I looked down and couldn't see him. I then rushed from the cage and ran down stairs and after some difficulty managed to induce the porter into showing me to the pit of the elevator shaft. There I found my son. I picked him up in my arms and laid him on a canvas. Later the doctor arrived and the boy was taken to the Burnett sanitarium."

ELEVATOR BOY ON STAND.

John Grant, the elevator boy, told of the party entering the cage and of the little boy falling through the spaces between the elevator and the wall. He stated that after the accident he remained with the elevator at the top of the shaft until he was ordered to descend. Grant also testified that he had been instructed not to allow children to ride in the cage unless accompanied by the parents or grown people. The elevator boy was exonerated from all blame for the accident.

Dr. Hopkins testified as to the extent of the injuries and the direct cause of death. He testified that Dr. Phorne had been called to the sanitarium but that they had been unable to do anything for the lad.

KNIGHT TESTIFIES.

H. P. Knight was the principal witness and he was asked many questions in regard to the elevator at the hotel. He testified that the same elevator had been in the hotel since he had been in charge and that only one slight change had been made. This was, according to his testimony, the taking away of a lattice iron screen which protected the side of the cage which was not used as an entrance. Knight said that the cage moved because it was not strong and he was afraid some one might lean too heavily against it. He testified that the iron screen had been replaced by a wooden rail with a sign warning people to be careful. According to Knight's testimony the space between the elevator and the side of the shaft is but 6 1/4 inches.

After the coroner had finished questioning Knight a juror asked him the following:

"How long has the hole been there?" (meaning the space between the elevator cage and the side of the shaft.)

"About two years."

"Do you consider the elevator safe for the guests?"

"As much as all other elevators about town."

"Why then did you have the danger sign there?"

"As an extra precaution."

"Didn't you consider it unsafe without the danger sign?"

"No, I didn't consider it unsafe."

"But you thought it unsafe without the danger sign?"

"Yes, I thought there might be danger without the sign."

The closing served on the jury: S. Cammella, T. A. Gall, C. A. Gray, H. A. Gale, J. W. Simpson, Alonzo Chance, and G. M. Simpson.

CHARTER MATTER COMES UP TUESDAY

The charter matter, which has fairly been taken up again at a meeting of the directors of the Fresno Merchants' Association on Tuesday. It was not taken up when H. O. Bonine returned from his last because of the fact that H. E. Wilkinson was out of the city. Wilkinson returned yesterday and announced that the charter matter would probably be taken up at the next meeting of the directors.

The charter petition, which was turned over to Wilkinson, when it was completed, was turned over to Bonine, chairman of the charter committee yesterday. Bonine will probably get it in shape to present on Tuesday together with a brief report of his trip East and his conclusions regarding the commission form of government.

"SCHULTZ IN VENICE" WILL BE NEW MUSICAL PRODUCTION AT TEAL'S

Raymond Teal, the merry minstrel man, at Teal's Theater.

Laugh and grow fat at Teal's this week, in the "by word" and the hundreds that have witnessed this week's show are all of the same voice, "a good show for the money."

Chorus Girls' Contest night was a hummer and the Friday night cake walk stunt captured them all. It was cleverly put over and those that were lucky enough to get a seat had the time of their lives. This coming week's bill, "Schultz in Venice," is a specially prepared offering for the closing week's run of the Teal players. Mr. Teal will bring an entire new organization, Dillon and King, for an indefinite run.

This week will be a memorable one, two contests being given, Wednesday and Friday night, and the show itself being such an elaborate one that it will be long remembered by those who go to see it as a revelation in a popular priced production. The entire act of the company will take part and the musical part is far the most elaborate of all previous shows. This afternoon's matinee and the evening shows will see the last of "King Gazooks."

"ALIAS JIMMY VALENTINE" FURNISHES THRILLS AND UNEXPECTED ACTION WITH EXCITING CLIMAXES

SCENE FROM "ALIAS JIMMY VALENTINE," IN WHICH H. B. WARNER COMES TO THE BARTON TOMORROW NIGHT.

With the endorsement of a two years' run and with a period of unbroken praise as the most intense story the stage has known in years, "Alias Jimmy Valentine" comes to the Barton Opera House tomorrow night. H. B. Warner will be seen in his remarkable creation of the reformed bank burglar and he will be supported by the company which surrounded him during the long Broadway stay at Wallack's. Mr. Warner, who will be recalled as leading man several years ago with Eleanor Robson, has gained no doubt the greatest hit accorded any young actor. The title role is most sympathetic and human. Paul Armstrong, the author, has written a strong, straightforward play that is every-day like in its incidents.

The box office will be open for the sale of seats today, from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m., and 6 to 8 p. m.

Lambardi Opera Company

Puccini's "Mime Butterfly," perhaps the most sensational and widely discussed of all modern operatic productions, is one of the so-called "royalty operas." The great work is now receiving a lavish presentation in London, whither Sig. Puccini has himself gone to witness the performance. The Japanese opera is one of the late sensations controlled by the publishing house of Ricordi & Co., Milan, Italy, which concern owns the foreign and American copyrights on all the Puccini works, such as "La Tosca," "La Boheme" and the opera to be heard in this city, as well as on the masterpieces of other famous composers.

The Italian parliament has taken up the matter of the Milan monopoly with a view to regulation of the royalty figures, while the leading musical journals of this country are waging a keen warfare against the royalty system with the object of eliminating the Puccini operas entirely from the repertoires of all American producers of opera. Thus, they claim, is the only safe and sure method by which the Milan monopoly may be brought down to a basis of reasonable commissions.

"Mime Butterfly," however, has proven to be the greatest operatic sensation of modern times. The Lambardi company will give the work a magnificent presentation at the Barton next Tuesday evening, October 31st.

Mime, Ida Fassio, the distinguished dramatic soprano, of New York, will sing the role of the dainty Japanese maiden, Cho Cho San, while the parts of "Pinkerton" and "Sharpless" will be assigned to Sig. Salazar and Sig. Arachi.

On Wednesday evening, November 1st, the Lambardi company will be heard in the double bill of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci."

"Don't Lie to Your Wife"

Coming direct from the successful run at the Whitney Opera House in Chicago, Dave Lewis will be seen in the song farce "Don't Lie to Your Wife," at the Barton on Sunday night, November 5th. One of the noted facts about all of Lewis' production is that this comedian always selects young ladies for his chorus with the Lillian Russell aspect. Rowland and Clifford are managing this comedian this season, and with what the author, Campbell B. Casad, has supplied in the matter of keen wit and satire, the whole production is the funniest that Dave Lewis has ever been connected with. Several specialties are introduced, such as always feature Lewis' plays, and the excellent entertainment is supplied by Miriam Shelby, Edna Roland, Gladys Wilcox, Lillian Stanley, Estelle Vernon, Lenore Gray, William C. Jones, Holworth Stark, Benton Garvin, Matt Franklin and Edward Spencer.

Gertrude Hoffmann

The art of torpichorean story telling, new to the English speaking world, has been brought to America by Gertrude Hoffmann, an enterprising and daring young woman who saw the beauty of the plastic drama when it was first revealed in Paris three years ago, and who in conjunction with Morris Gest and P. Ray Comstock, had the temerity to introduce "La Saison des Ballets Russes" at the Winter Garden, New York, where its unique beauty, its grace, and its appeal to the senses made it the reigning sensation of the metropolis during all the summer. Miss Hoffmann brings her "Saison Russes" to

"DOWN ON THE FARM" NEXT WEEK'S BILL AT EMPIRE

Drama of Country Life Offers Happy Mixture of Joy and Sorrow.

Myrtle Langford, Clifford Thompson and Max Waldman will be missed from the cast of "Down on the Farm," next week's bill at the Empire, as they leave after the performance tonight to accept engagements elsewhere. Three well known players, new to this city, will arrive in time to appear in the show the week following, however. The absence of three of the favorites of the Thorne company during next week will make no material difference in the play "Down on the Farm," for although it is a strong rural play swarming of the best kind, the cast is not unusually long and is well provided for. Major James H. Thorne, father of Frank Thorne, who will be remembered by many as a member of former stock companies in Fresno, is to appear next week in a character part for which he is a distinct type. Major Thorne's forceful and convincing acting is well remembered and there are a great many who will be pleased to welcome him again.

The story of "Down on the Farm" is one of those gripping tales of sorrows and joys of country life, made dramatic and thrilling because of incidents suddenly thrust upon the peaceful mode of country living which seldom come to the lives of those living in the whirl of great cities. There will be shed over "Down on the Farm," but for every tear there will be a laugh to dry it and joy will have supremacy over sorrow at the end of the story.

The departure of Miss Langford, Mr. Thompson and Mr. Waldman will be regretted by every patron of the Empire, doubtless, for these three talented members of the profession have done much to make the Thorne Company the most popular of any that has played in Fresno. Miss Langford will be succeeded by Miss Higgins, a charming young lady on and off the stage. Rose Karnes, late of the Newman-Polts Company, will succeed Mr. Thompson and those who have seen Mr. Karnes act will vouch for his exceptional talent. Mr. Waldman is to be supplanted by Emory Marsh, who is coming to Fresno from one of the best stock companies of the north-west.

This afternoon and tonight will witness the last performance of the Thorne company in "My Husband's Children," and the last appearance in this city for the present of Miss Langford, Mr. Thompson and Mr. Waldman.

"THE TWO ORPHANS," 3-ACT PLAY, IS FEATURE AT FRESNO PHOTO THEATER

What a wonderful thing it is to give an entire play in motion pictures instead of a quantity of short chopped up insignificant stories.

The day when patrons counted the number of pictures and judged the show by quantity rather than by quality has passed never to return. That kind of patronage, in the course of the development of the moving picture, has been replaced by audiences of a decidedly higher grade and better average. Quality is today the test much more than quantity. The Fresno Photo Theater has proved it absolutely in the short time that they have been in Fresno. They run four reels, changing only three times a week, and have demonstrated the superiority of this method over a greater quantity of junk.

This being the case, the beautiful three reel feature photo play ought to be the greatest guarantee of artistic success. Why? Because the feature film of greater length must be built upon quality; it must breathe quality in every inch, or it fails, even before it starts. At the present time, the best of literature and history furnish the materials for the feature film exclusively. This is natural. A great masterpiece that has pleased and charmed many generations, that has moved countless millions to happy laughter and healthy sorrow, surely will please the most of us today. And a three act photo play will more effectively tell the story than will a single reel. It is like going to the theater.

The success of the Two Orphans was instantaneous. It is a magnificent production of that famous novel, written in the long ago by the authoress Kate Claxton, and has been beautifully staged by the Selig Company. The stage settings are rich, the costumes perfect and after seeing the show, one feels that he or she has been to a real play at a real theater.

The musical renditions are a marvel of execution, a feature that the Fresno theater has developed to the highest rung of the ladder. For a "picture show" we have never heard such a musical program. The music alone without the pictures is a treat and an evening's entertainment in itself. This "playing the pictures" is an art, to which Turner and Dinkhen have devoted the last three years to developing. No feature is ever sent from their headquarters, unless it has been studied by their master musicians, who, in turn, send the musical programs to the various theaters on the circuit, ahead of the picture. Thus, a perfect rehearsal is had at once, and the audiences see and hear perfect productions at the very start.

It is truly wonderful, and the Motion Picture Lovers are appreciating it more and more. The pleasure with which the Two Orphans was received is ample proof of the popularity of the three reel production, and it is to be hoped that the Fresno Photo Theater will give us many more of these delightful Photo plays. Under the new system, once a play has come to a certain locality, it is played according to schedule and then leaves, never to return. This means that the Two Orphans will never come back to Fresno after this evening's last performance. If you haven't seen it, you have missed a photo play that typifies the highest in the art of the new methods.

And, by all means, if you do go, pay particular attention to the artistic musical program. It really is quite half of the photo play.

The "Fresno" promises another treat next week, when they will present another three act feature. It is a dramatization of Charles Reade's immortal "Foul Play." It is acted by that excellent company of Edison players, which in itself is sufficient recommendation. This is the same company that produced The Battle of Trafalgar, probably the greatest one reel play ever presented to the public.

Ida Fassio, soprano of Lambardi Opera Company, coming to the Barton.

FRENCH FASHION NOTES

PARIS, Oct. 18.

LONG velvet wraps are very much in evidence. Indeed, the vogue for velvet is very strong in walking suits, in one-piece frocks for wear under the long coat, and the velvet "hood" or bonnet is ubiquitous. Let me describe a long black velvet wrap worn out to the Pre Cotelain. It was quite straight in line, with deep cuffs and collar of plaid liberty satin. The whole was lined with plaid, and buttons in plaid enamel, that one cannot doubt were made for the wrap, were used.

Another coat had revers and cuffs of bright blue and black corded silk. Some loose, draped wraps have dull embroidery reflecting oriental designs and colors.

Broad bands of cerise mousseline de sole are being shown on collars for separate wraps.

Bright rose satin veiled with gray chiffon and trimmed with cream lace made a charming evening gown. With it was shown a broad band of pink silk embroidered in coral and steel beads and edged with a frill of lace. This is almost a cap for the head, but just a trifle different from the mobcap of the summer.

Velvet quilts embroidered in soutache are used as trimming for white felt hats.

Many quilts show edging of fringe or fur. The woolen flowers and embroidery are much used on velvet hats.

Bright-blue silk in the form of a cocarde is the favorite trimming on colored felt hats.

Silk cord and silk fringe form the trimming for a mushroom hat of black velvet with a high puffed crown. With this hat there comes a "postbag" of black velvet edged with fringe on a white cord. This is a very new note. The bag to match the hat is the favorite idea.

Large white satin hats with velvet trimming in dark colors are very chic. Dark-blue serge dresses are showing revers and cuffs of white satin. White pearl buttons are also used.

Dracoll is emphasizing long sleeves on afternoon gowns. These are reminiscent of the old-time leg-o-mutton, but there is a modish and graceful difference. Many of the frocks for indoor functions of this house show collarless bodices.

The small high hat with no frame to crush the hair is in great vogue. These "horns" are of felt, camel-hair cloth in bright blue, pink and scarlet, and are combined with black velvet that forms the crown. In many cases this latter is puffed in high, unusual shape, projecting out at the side and back.

Black-and-white shoes in chambray, kid, patent leather and cloth are keeping up the emphasis on the favorite combination. And on the whole, fashions are prettier than ever.

ELOISE.

Frills and Flounces

FRILLS and flounces play an important part in the styles of today. Even on the most subdued models flounces appear on house gowns of all kinds; for afternoon and evening wear they are particularly popular. Bodices that suggest the second empire tendencies are trimmed with pleatings that form a basque marking the waist.

A few are showing the resurrection of the accordion pleating.

This, however, is scant; we have no skirts over two and a half yards around, even if they are pleated.

Flouncers of lace trim many of the newest skirts. Double flounces, puffs and ruffles of satin with fringed edges appear in place of a hem at the bottom of short afternoon frocks.

One odd model of soft blue silk has a scant lace flounce wrapped around the narrow skirt in spiral fashion from the raised waist line to the skirt's edge, where it encircles the entire skirt.

The fichu effect, being so strongly pronounced, gives ample opportunity for the use of frills. Next, lace, mousseline de sole, chiffon and every fabric that is soft enough to lend itself to frilling is employed in intricate groupings, draperies, on the outer edge of which a frill is always placed and frequently on the inner edge.

Ruchess and tiny frills trim collars and cuffs and border draperies on many of the gowns.

These are made of lace, of net or of silk with fringed edges. They give a certain soft, fluffy note to an otherwise plain frock, and are especially adapted to be worn on gowns for the debutante or young matron.

Funics of transparent material veiling satin or brocade evening gowns are frequently bordered with a flounce of fine lace, especially if the tunic be draped.

She who has a store of lace just laid away in tissue paper, old lace that has been in the family for generations, may count herself fortunate, for this will be the season when she will have the opportunity to let it see the light of day, or perhaps the light of many softly shaded electric bulbs, adorning her evening gowns in varied frills and flounces.

THE LONG SEPARATE COAT

FOR all-around comfort and utility the long separate coat is still much in favor in Paris. The well-dressed Parisienne always numbers one long coat in her outfit and uses it for traveling by boat, train or motor. That is one of the reasons for the immaculate, "chic" appearance of the Frenchwoman, even in a railroad station.

There are many new touches that our designers in the great center of fashion have added to new fall models. For instance, the monk's hood, which is the large circular or square collar converted to a pointed and lashed hood at the back, is one of the additions to long serge, ratine, cheviot or English suiting cloaks. This can really be used as a hood, the front revers buttoning over and the capucin fully protecting the head.

Buttons in large mother-of-pearl, tortoise-shell or brass form a decided feature in trimming the separate coat. Fringe is used largely to simulate buttonholes and to give a jaunty, military effect.

Triple capes, double capes and large pockets are in vogue, while the linings of these favorites are serviceable and decidedly attractive. They are supplied with many ample pockets, and the wearer can rejoice in a delightful warmth as well.

Some models show a fastening at the right side, but generally speaking our Parisienne prefers to button over to the left and this modistes have regarded her choice.

Contrasting collars and cuffs of white on colors or bright colors on neutral shades are the mode.

Some wraps or coats are cut on straight lines and others have odd little seams and deviations from the straight models. Little panels are inset, the line of the waist is clearly suggested on some and belts are very much in evidence.

Large revers are the feature, and the pointed or round shaped collars at the back promise to decorate successfully the favorite garment.

Heavy double-faced cloths are widely used. This means that folded-back hem, revers, cuff or lap will trim the coat by its contrasting pattern. Just a few buttons added to this, and madame is ready.

In closing our little chat on coats, let the question of sleeves be not disregarded. For very wide material the vogue for the kimono sleeve is still emphasized. Raglan sleeves are also used on storm coats. The comfort of these types is to be regarded and seems to promise a decided continuation of the favor of the last season.

VARIETY IN TRIMMINGS

AFTER selecting one of the many beautiful fabrics that fall fashions are waiting for you, you are confronted with the problem of trimming the dress. Over in Paris the designers have provided for all colors, lines and combinations, and a wealth of trimming is shown for your benefit.

First, there are gorgeous beaded trimmings, that are lovelier than those of last year—and who could imagine anything to surpass the beadwork of the spring? But the seemingly impossible has been accomplished.

Garnitures, boleros, tunics, motifs and bands are made of chiffon, net, mullins, and beaded in oriental colorings and rich effects.

The Egyptian and East Indian effects are prominent, and Persian colorings vie with them for favor.

Besides the beaded accessories, there are fringes of beads that are convincing and tempting in their beauty.

Fringes of silk, of chenille and of Irish crochet lace and balls are also in vogue.

This trimming is perhaps the most persistent factor in all plans of the French designers.

Exquisite embroideries are offered to your inquiring eye. Here are hands of net embroidered in ribbon that gives raised effects in flowers, which are much used in the quaint Louis modes.

Then there are combinations of silk and beads.

The vogue for chenille embroidery is emphasized in the majority of cases. Closely related to this is the favoritism accorded to wool embroidery.

Imitation jewels are used on trimmings for decorating evening gowns. Rhinestones that are of expensive quality are combined with coral and sapphires in wonderful designs on ornaments for dress.

Gold and silver metallic effects are exploited by many modistes, and for evening especially they will hold important place.

Buttons are shown in greater numbers than ever. And that's saying much for buttons. The smallest shapes of blue, velvet and satin are used on neckwear and blouses. Bone buttons colored so that they match the fall gittings are decided features in trimming tailored suits. Pearl buttons and tortoise-shell are used on long coats, and silver and brass are in evidence on collars and cuffs of bright colors.

Brads and cords are another decorative agent for fall use. The brads are twisted and turned into all kinds of ornaments, and the variety of widths and designs in the flat brads ought to meet every demand.

Altogether, the decoration of your gown is solved for you. From the immense offering of the fall the Paris designer chooses, and it is for you to emulate his example.

Fichu Fastenings

THE popularity of the Marie Antoinette fichu is undeniable. The fichu line is one of grace and beauty and is used generally by the prominent modistes on the fall and winter models.

But how is the fichu fastened? There are many answers to that question.

Antique buckles are used on evening dresses to a great extent. Chiffon net, spangle, soft lace and mousseline are folded across the shoulders and fastened at the front on the girle under oval, square, circular and in regular metal buckles, that are really "old" or cleverly wrought to imitate the antique forms.

Fabric ornaments are also used. The velvet bow, the silk rosette or cabochon of lace, the twisted form of cording are exemplifications of the buckle idea.

Huge flowers are also used, and bunches of small blossoms have come into their deserved popularity.

The designers never neglect an opportunity to improve a decorative point. They have made the most of the fichu fastenings, and we are the ones who will profit by their cleverness and their knowledge of the beautiful in dress.

IN THE great decision of the pretty and the proper thing to wear you must not forget the children. They must be well dressed and must reflect just a little of the changes in the styles. Simplicity, above all, must be the determining factor in dress for the little ones. With two remnants perhaps, or with the addition of silk or braid, you can make a charming little frock for school or gala days.

Look at the group before you. Blue serge is used for the oldest girl's dress. It is a style for the 10 or 14 year old girl. It emphasizes comfort and successfully conceals any awkwardness of figure. The bodice is still the kimono, you will see.

Subtleties are braided to match the collar. These are of white damask or voile. Hemstitched linen is also finding much favor for the collar and cuffs on serge. White bone buttons and soutache braid for loops are placed in a straight line down the front. There is a double skirt, wide hems with stitching finishing the edges. A leather belt is worn with the dress.

Soft white felt, simply trimmed with a feather ornament, is good for this girl.

is trimmed with a velvet band and wired loops. This design in serge, with plaid silk collar and cuffs, is very practical and becoming.

The fourth suggestion can be copied in heavy linen if you wish washable frocks, or in lightweight henrietta, venetian cloth or serge. Narrow soutache is used on the serpentine braid design of blue ratine and has bands of darker blue as trimming. There are long revers that form a pointed collar at the back. These are edged with dark from Paris are delightful solutions to the question that is always assailing each mother's mind. Let the group answer for your daughter.

The Bag To Match The Hat

ONE might almost call this the "matching age," for now to be in fashion one's clothes must match, and so must the accessories; or, if they do not exactly match the costume, they at least must correspond. Here we have hats and bags that match.

Nowadays the fancy handbag is as much a part of the costume as the hat itself; therefore, fashion dictates that they must match.

If, then, you choose a hat of black velvet showing a brim trimmed with white silk fringe, your bag must also be of black velvet and white fringe. Behold in the picture a very good shape, edged with white fringe, fastened over with a crocheted button and held by a long black silk cord.

Illustration of the point. The hat is made with a high, full crown of velvet, with rows of fringe sewed to the narrow brim. The bag is simply a little envelope

The hat with a blue-and-gold tapestry brim has a puffed crown of blue satin held down with thick gold cord, knotted gracefully on one side.

The same idea is carried out in the bag, which is made of gold-and-blue tapestry, edged with gold galloon and carried by a long gold cord that is knotted on each side.

Suede bags are carried with velvet hats trimmed with crown bands and felt pump bows of suede.

A very handsome set is made of royal purple satin veiled with fine black flit net and brightened with cut jet ornaments.

The bag shows the net veiling, as does a huge pillow muff which has its sides edged with fur.

Keep in mind, when selecting your winter hat, to have a bag made to match; and if you would be decidedly in the mode, have a muff to complete the set.

THE MUTINEERS OF THE FOAM

BETRAYED by a New York Bully, Whose Life the Captain Saved After Knocking Him Overboard, They Were Outwitted, but Subdued Only After a Desperate Fight reached the davits Captain Bradley had leaped to the rail and disappeared in the foamy water.

"Luff here!" I yelled. All hands stood by to man the boats. Johnson, lower away and pick them up.

Under my orders the men ran back to their work. There was no time to lose. Lightning split the clouds on the westward, and thunder rumbling nearer with each flash told of the coming storm. Johnson told me after-ward how he had found the Captain stupid with approaching suffocation, but clinging stubbornly to Morton, who was unconscious. The men dragged them into the boat and the Captain fainted. In his cabin we piled him with brandy and he came around little the worse.

That was the beginning of real trouble. There were no more back answers, but the men showed mighty defiance that they were working under compulsion and they had to be driven to every task.

The Captain and I were working over the chart in his cabin one night and figuring when we might hit the straits. We were about 50 degrees south and 45 west at the time and the winds were pretty favorable. The dingy lump didn't give out a whole lot of light and I looked up for a moment to rest my eyes. There in the doorway stood a man, silent and motionless. It startled me, and when my eyes became accustomed to the new focus I saw it was Morton.

"What do you want?" I asked.

The Captain looked up at that and frowned when he saw who was there. Morton did not say a word, but stood rather clumsily into the cabin. His eye was still swollen and he did not have a very pretty face. He addressed all his remarks to the Captain.

"I don't like you," he said, "and I never will because you looked me up, but you saved my life and I owe this to you. The men are going to do you."

The Captain rose abruptly.

"Do you threaten me?" he growled.

"No," said Morton. "I just came to warn you. They'll kill me if they know I was doing it, but you saved my life. I'm peaching on them, do you see? I'm coming over to your side."

"Sit down," said Bradley as he resumed his seat. "Now tell us all about it."

"It's this way," said Morton. "The men say they've stood your bullying long enough. The right of that I don't say, but no matter how I feel about it I'm bound to stick by you for saving my life and I'll tell you all."

"What's their game," asked Bradley. "During the first watch tonight," said Morton, "all but one of the men on the deck will be those in the plot. The one man who is sticking by you is to be thrown overboard. The mutiny will be hatched down, and without any noise you and Mr. Morton will be done away with. After that it will be easy to handle the rest of the crew."

"Who is going to navigate?" asked the Captain.

"Bolton and Jamison," said Morton, naming two of the experienced seamen whom we had never held in suspicion.

"The lure of gold got them," sneered the Captain. "How do all the men stand?" he asked.

Morton named all the men of the crew, and the Captain checked off the names in the log book. It seemed that of the experienced men only two had joined the mutineers. For the landmen two had refused to join the rebellion, but had been intimidated into promising to remain silent.

That made the division of the men fifteen against us and eight for us. The Captain and I brought the numbers to ten to fifteen. Captain Bradley smiled wickedly as he contemplated the situation. There was nothing of fear in his thoughts and he was more than satisfied with the number of men at his disposal. It appeared that none of the old seamen was de-shift part of the cargo in preparation for the replacing of the water casks. There was only one hatch to be used. The three men started below, but the Captain silently restrained Sawyer, the loyal man, and let the other two go down the ladder first.

As their heads disappeared Bradley slammed down the hatch cover and fastened the clamps. The seaman on deck was so surprised he did not move until the Captain had straightened himself and covered the man with a pistol.

Captain Royal Morgan, who is fifty years old, is at present living in Tompkinsville, State Island. From his little cottage he can watch steamers and schooners as they pass out into the great ocean, where all his life has centered. Captain Morgan does not look his age. He seems not older than seventy-five years and is sprightly for that. He is a fund of information about the sea and has many queer tales of strange lands, but the following is of the one mutiny which he has seen.

By CAPTAIN ROYAL MORGAN

It never pays to ship landmen. They have been used times and again, but the skipper who does it will find himself in trouble before he's back in port. Landmen are not used to the way of the sea, and they are not built so they can accustom themselves to it very easily. Take one or two in a crew and it's all right, but when you come to have them in the majority task was not so easy. The men in the wharves were mostly experienced and our boat naturally would have made better time. I had to ease the men off continually and keep a stern of the whaler. Finally we had dragged back about fifty yards. I was watching the Captain for a signal we had agreed upon. At last it came and I ordered the men to stop rowing.

"The Captain is signaling us to return," I said. "He will have orders."

Shouting through a megaphone, I hauled the other boat. I stopped and spoke to the seaman in charge, telling him to go ashore and wait there for us. He seemed doubtful, but had his men row away. Back alongside the ship the Captain shouted down to us that there was trouble in the hold. The hanging of the prisoners there made this seem plausible enough and the men clambered on board. Morton and I went aboard last. He had a pistol and we ranged ourselves beside the Captain.

"Frustrating the plot," said Bradley, addressing the men who were grouped by the rail waiting for orders, "you men are not armed and we have all carry pistols. If it had come to a fight you might have won, but you see there would be several of you to lose your lives in the fracas. There is a mutiny in this ship."

The men began to remonstrate, but Bradley went on.

"I know that none of you men are aware of it. I believe you all to be true, but we want to have an understanding. Every man in that whaleboat is a mutineer and will not be attempting to return to this ship. If you want to join them you can take a boat and go ashore. If you prefer to remain here under my command all right."

The answer was cheerful. Meanwhile I had been watching the whaleboat. Several times it had come to a full stop and the foxswain had stood up looking at the ship. With the sound of the cheering the men in the boat seemed to realize that something had gone wrong with them and the boat was put about. Splashing and rolling, the men pulled for all they were worth in the direction of the ship.

While we on the deck watched them, confident that we had the upper hand, when they were within a few rods of us the Captain mounted the rail, holding to one of the stays.

"Look here in the whaler," he yelled. "You men are forbidden to board this ship. You are guilty of mutiny, and if you set foot on this deck you are pirates and I shall act accordingly."

He pointed his pistol menacingly at the men in the boat. Morton and I sprang to the rail flourishing our weapons and warning the men away. Four men crew peeked over the side with no friendly expression on their faces.

For the reply the men in the whaleboat cursed Morton in all the most picturesque oaths of the sea.

"That will do," shouted Bradley. "Clear out of here or we'll open fire on you. This ship will be at anchor here for a few days. If you men choose to return and work under my orders, all right. If not you stay ashore and we will continue our cruise."

At dinner Captain Bradley and I laid out our plans. It was decided to give the men three days in which to come to our terms. At the expiration of that time we would up anchor and away. It was late when we finished discussing our plans and went above to see that all was well before turning to go to bed.

Half up the companionway, I heard a splash as of heavy object falling overboard. As I thrust my head there was a scurry of feet, and, swimming over the bow, half a dozen naked or half clothed bodies clambered onto the deck.

The forward watch was not to be seen. The first of the men to climb on the anchor chain had killed him and he had been thrown overboard. As I caught my pistol into the mass of scrambling men the situation flashed across my mind. The mutineers had swam to the ship, some stark naked, others wearing only short cut breeches to carry their knives. Crawling up by the anchor chain and the cables under the bowerpit they had surprised the watchman, who was prepared for the approach of a boat.

With the bang of a pistol the man who had been stationed aft ran toward me. The foremost of the attacking party hurled his knife with terrible precision and it clattered to the deck as I ducked my head.

Before our man had closed with his assailant the Captain was up the ladder behind me and I sprang to the deck. Men tumbled from below and swarmed over the deck. Two wet naked fellows clutched with me and we rolled about the deck. They were unarmed and managed to get my knife loose and soon had them rolling helplessly.

Then following a melee of plunging, kicking, fighting bodies struggling for life in the dark. How many of the mutineers had boarded, no one could tell. There must have been ten or more. In a full after freeing myself the first two men to attack me I loaded my pistol. Morton was fighting like a tiger with three of the rebels. One drew off a pair and ran, and another clutched him about the legs, throwing him to the deck. I fired at the man who was sprawling out, and he rolled away from the mass. Then I ran in and clutched one of the men who had Morton by the throat. With the first blow of the butt of my pistol on his skull he relaxed and lay helpless on the deck. I left Morton to deal with his remaining assailant and turned in time to engage a big man who was rushing at me with a knife. Jumping aside I tripped him and slashed with my own knife as he fell. It laid his arm open and he showed no further desire to fight.

PLUNGED INTO THE SEA.

I had just felled a man who attacked me with my bare fist when some one of the mutineers gave a yell and plunged overboard. In a panic they all followed him. Lanterns were brought in no time and we began to take account of things. Three of our men were wounded so that they could not rise from the deck. They were hurried below to receive what attention we could give them, and then we found that five of the enemy had been unable to leave the ship. Two of these had flesh wounds in the arm and were simply unable to swim. The other two were badly hurt and carried them to the cabin. One afterward died, and we learned that one of the men who attempted to swim to shore never reached land.

The man who had been killed and thrown overboard made the list of killed three. Serious wounds were sustained by five men on both sides, and there was scarcely a man who was not cut or battered more or less.

Next day we could see the enemy moving about on shore cooking and foraging for food, which they seemed to find. That night the watch was doubled and there was no trouble. Next day five men put off from shore in the whaleboat. With four men at the oars progress was slow and they often rested. Finally, alone, the man in the stern held the captain's permission to go on board.

Bradley granted it and a short conference was held.

"I'll take you men back," said our captain. "If you promise to serve under my orders. You shall give up all arms. My own men will be armed fully as our stock of weapons will permit. At Prince you will be allowed to go ashore, provided your conduct is satisfactory until we reach that port. At the first offense every man of you will be put in irons and taken back to New York, where I will turn you over to the police for murder of one man of this crew, for mutiny and for piracy."

The spokesman for the mutineers, I think his name was Thompson agreed to the terms. The men were sick, he said, and most of them had wounds which needed treatment. They would be only too glad to return to the ship.

Well, the voyage was continued. At Prince we discharged all the men who had taken part in the mutiny and recruited some able seamen. The return voyage was uneventful, even monotonous. Many a later voyage I made in the Foam with never a serious trouble, and I sailed under Captain Bradley until his death, in 1880, when I got a ship of my own.

"I think vengeance—and by vengeance I mean punishment—making us all worse rather than better," replied Mr. Oiler. "I have asked mercy for Ruef because I feel that I did most to bring about his downfall. The Bulletin fought Ruef long before the rest of San Francisco woke up. I attacked him with all the invective I could command and all that I could live. I cartooned him in stripes. I described him on the way to the penitentiary at San Quentin."

"I was vindictive, unscrupulous, savage. I went to Washington and enlisted Henry in the fight. William J. Burns came and I persuaded Sprockles to help us. At last after years of a man-hunting and man-hating debacle that was satisfactory until we reach that port. At the first offense every man of you will be put in irons and taken back to New York, where I will turn you over to the police for murder of one man of this crew, for mutiny and for piracy."

The spokesman for the mutineers, I think his name was Thompson agreed to the terms. The men were sick, he said, and most of them had wounds which needed treatment. They would be only too glad to return to the ship.

Well, the voyage was continued. At Prince we discharged all the men who had taken part in the mutiny and recruited some able seamen. The return voyage was uneventful, even monotonous. Many a later voyage I made in the Foam with never a serious trouble, and I sailed under Captain Bradley until his death, in 1880, when I got a ship of my own.

WHY RUEF'S FOE RELENTED

San Francisco Editor's Soul Revolted After Long Years of Persecution

Fremont Oiler, editor of the San Francisco Bulletin, who sent Abraham Ruef to jail and now wants him set free, was asked to explain his position in the case of the convicted grafter. The Bulletin's attitude toward the man who has been a thorn in the side of many politicians is explained.

"I think vengeance—and by vengeance I mean punishment—making us all worse rather than better," replied Mr. Oiler. "I have asked mercy for Ruef because I feel that I did most to bring about his downfall. The Bulletin fought Ruef long before the rest of San Francisco woke up. I attacked him with all the invective I could command and all that I could live. I cartooned him in stripes. I described him on the way to the penitentiary at San Quentin."

It ain't often that we get asked a thing which makes us wonder whether we know anything or not, but we got asked something tother day which made us wonder that and so we are going to turn it into a editorial and write about it editorially. This question is "What Good is Winter?"

Winter is on its way to us, as anybody can tell by trying to go to sleep with nothing but a sheet and one blanket on the bed. Every day it is getting colder and colder and pretty soon the little white snowflakes will begin to come down and the hens will stop laying and our hands and our noses will begin to git cold, and the world won't hardly be fit to live in.

Now what good is winter? Winter is cold and uncomfortable. It costs us more to live in winter than it costs us to live in summer. We have to buy winter underclothes and heavy plain clothes and we have to have fires and we have to light our lights at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and it ain't light till after 7 o'clock in the morning. We git chilblains in our feet and can't wear our old shoes because they are too small. We freeze our fingers or our toes and they all swell up. Our water pipes freeze up and bust on us. We get colds and rheumytiz and quinsys and sore throats.

Mebbe you will say that we don't know what use winter is because we ain't ekspekted to know. Mebbe you will say that winter was give to us by a power that knows more about things than we do, so that we ought to accept it uncomplaining and believe that it is some good, even if we can't see what good it is. If this is the case, then why didn't the people down in California and Mexico and Cuba get a cold-weather winter give to them. They don't never have any snow. Things grow all winter down there. They can turn their critters out to paschure all winter. Also they can wear thin clothes all winter. They ain't never cold nor uncomfortable. If cold and snow is necessary, why wasn't these people forced to have cold weather along of us? They seem to get along all right. Why is it?

We are forced to acknowledge that we don't know what good winter is. It is a harder fight for us to get subscriptions paid in winter than it is in summer. If there is any person in Bingville or near Bingville who knows what good is winter, we wish he would let us know so that we can let everybody else around here, who don't think winter is any good whatever at the present writing, know what good it is.

Winter is coming, and you are all going to have a heap of troubles. Why be alone in your troubles? Subscribe for the Bugle, and read about the troubles of others.

Personals & Locals Mixt

Mel Skinner and Lige Green, who walked to the Co. seat and back for the Co. fair, are suffering greatly from their corns, both having a unusual amount of very large ones.

Uncle Jed Winslow had a boil on his 75th birthday last Wensday. How is this for a boil when well along in years. Uncle Jed says this boil which is on his neck just to the northeast of the top of his backbone hurts him just as much as the boils he used to get when he was a boy if not more.

Ras Slocomb has been suffering from a terrible headache, which he says he thinks he got from listening so attentive trying to locate the quails in the woods. There may be something in this. Ras says there is no place where he wouldn't rather have a headache than in his head. He says that his head is the most painful part of his body for a headache to settle in, and that he would a big sign rather have it in his feet or somewhere like that.

Miss Phoebe Hilderbrand, our fashionable dressmaker, burnt her finger on her iron while ironing a dress which needed ironing. It is now impossible for her to ply her needle, so to speak, and many may be disappointed in their fall outfits to hear Phoebe tell it.

Git Smalley, while engaged in sharpening a carving knife on his grindstone tother day, and while holding his face close to the grindstone to observe the action of the stone on the knife, as it were, had his foot to slip off the crank of the grindstone so that his body descended two or three inches quickly, this bringing his nose against the surface of the grindstone, and grinding several inches of skin off his nose. Git can afford to lose a little skin off his nose, say we.

Brad Hinsel of Sorrow Hollow was in for tobacco tother day, he having run out of tobacco last wk., and had time to come in for same, and having smoked dry sweet-fern mixed in with a few tobacco grains to tide him along till he could get in.

Wes Wondruft, our expert hunter and trapper, went hunting tother day for foxes. He killed a rabbit.

Miss Molly Tucker of here purchased a new pair of corsets, all the bones having rusted outen her old pair, and wore same to church last Sun. They being extremely tight, Miss Molly was considerably inconvenienced when it come to singing, she being unable to draw a deep breath. She left the church hurriedly and hastened home, where she slacked same and felt better.

Hen Weathersby, prop. of our gen'l store, found a pair of store teeth in the middle of the road while going to the Co. Fair. He dusted them off but was unable to wear same. He is willing to sell these teeth for a fair price to anyone desiring them.

Abe Withrow has a ingrowing toenail which he cannot do anything with no matter what he does. This hurts Abe day and night till it seems as if he would almost go crazy. If we was Abe, we would cut off the end of our toe rather than fuss around with such a contrary littel piece of mechanism.

Bud Hinkley, who aint quite right in his head, went into Hen Weathersby's gen'l store tother day and asked for a package of icicle seed. Someone put Bud up to this, and it shows what a fool Bud is to go and do a thing like that.

ELEGANT CO. FAIR

Voted by Everybody That Great Fair at Hardscrabble Was Awful Nice, A Lovely Time Being Had by All. Read About the Horse Raising and Other Things

The Co. fair to which all the Co. has been looking forward to for wks. and wks. and some for a much longer period of time was held with great elow and elegance and appreciation upon the Co. fair grounds at Hardscrabble on Turesday and Wensday of last wk. all records for attendance and everything else being broke with a good cal of ease.

The tole attendance for the two days reached the enormous figure of 796, 302 being present on Tuesday and 494 being present on Wensday, not counting the vast number of cows and sheeps and dogs and other live stock which attended both days.

The horse raising was particularly grand on Wensday afternoon, and arousing storms of applause and interest as you might say. The 4:00 minnit trot for a purse of $10 attracted the largest number of competitors and enthusiasm, and to make the day perfect for those who attended from these parts and to sort of show that Bingville is the leading town in this section of the Co. this grate rase was won by none other than Cy Hoskines littel brown mare Moving Pikshur. It was a acknowledged fact in Bingville that this littel mare was a very fast hoss, but it was not generally recognized that she could trot much under 4:20. But when she won the 4:00 minnit trot handily, and breezed under the wire in the last heat in the phenomenal time of 3:49, she plainly showed that she was one of the greatest littel mares that was ever foaled hereabouts. Who knows what this littel mare may not do if she has the proper training? Far be it from us to say that she could not another year erier and win with ease the grate 2:40 derby over to the Pottawassie Fair.

There was some exhibitions of garden truck and such like that beggers description. There was a cucumber three ft. 7 in. in length that was raised by Rale Hawkins of here. It took a prize, what the prize was we not having yet learned. Also a Cochon China hen belonging to Mrs. Abe Skinner of here took a blue ribbon. Mrs. Eph Higgins, wife of our accomodatio P. M., sent over several of her delicious apple and punkin pies and had the joy of seeing them win prizes for the deliciousness of their manufacture.

Practically everybody from here was represented at the Fair, especially those who have relatives at the Co. seat. Bill Hepburn, our artistick blacksmith, who is well known at the Co. seat, although he has no relatives there, although there are those who think he is related to the bartender at the Co. seat, spent Tuesday and Wensday at the Co. seat, becoming very intoxicated on Tuesday a. m. and remaining in that condition until a late hour Wensday night. He was accompanied by Bill Yates of here, who also joined him in his debauch.

There was many entertaining shows at the Fair, in addition to the regular farm exhibits and horse raising. There was 7 dancing girls who had been brought straight from Cairo, Egypt, to the Fair. They were advertised as being very beautiful, but they weren't terrible beautiful according to our ideas of beauty. They were awful good dancers, however, and their tent was thronged all day long by everybody who could get away from their wives. There was also a five-legged dog which was very instructive and educational.

A man was going to go up in a balloon, but he did not do so, because the wind blew too hard, and besides he couldn't get his balloon filled up with hot air. Taking it all together, this Co. Fair was the most enjoyable ever had, and everybody left voting a pleasant time had been had by all.

ZION CROSSROADS

Turrible cold these nights. Bill Hendricks is sufferin from a violent cold in his head, causing his eyes to be red and his nose to be the same color, only deeper, and fixing him so as he can't hear or see much, or even taste the whiskey which he drinks for same. He took a bath last Saturday ev'g, disregarding the warning of Mrs. Hendricks, and he allows this cold is on acct of taking a bath so late in the yr. He says he has learned his lesson, and will never take another bath betwixt Oct. 1 and May 1, no matter whether he needs same or not.

Eb Hoover one day last wk. placed his old cat Hannah in his corner to destroy the rats, which had did a lot of damage there, and left her shet up there all one day and night. When he come to open the door, he found Hannah playing real friendly-like with a great big rat. Hannah is a turrible good mouser.

Miss Hildy Wade, the bell of the Crossroads, is sufferin torchures from a bealin on her left ear, which is so all-fired painful that she aint hardly fit to talk to, she is so snappy.

We had hoped to be able to tell of the visit of the Grim Reaper to these parts this wk., but he is still loth to come forward as you might say.

Mrs. Ben Truman is the fond mother of a lovely 6½-lb. baby child, which was brought by that accomodating bird the stork one day last wk., we forget which day. Doc Livermore, the well known Bingville veterinary and human doctor being present to welcome the stork. The sex of the baby child is not known by us at this writing, we having forgot to ask.

Enos McCracken has took the contract to run the snow-plow in this district during the coming winter. This looks to us a good deal like a gambel. Enos contracted to do the work for $175 a mo., which is all right if it don't snow more than 3 or 6 times a mo. But if it snows 10 or 18 times a mo., Enos will be working for abt 1 cent per hr. all winter, which aint much to work for, as we see it.

News are extremely plenty this wk. We could of writ a lot more, but didn't. VERITAS.

the fence and landed within 2 inches of Hyde's foot. Two more inches to the left and Hyde's foot would of been crushed and horribly mangled.

Mrs. Wally Peters thinks she has discovered what gives her such ofal pains in the head during thunder storms. Mrs. Wally wears a wire rat in her hair, and she thinks that when there is a thunder storm, the electricity in the air gets into her wire-rat-and-from there goes into her head and gives her headaches. After this she is going to take down her hair during thunder storms.

Sid Hendricks shaved off his beard last wk. and caught a turrible cold in his head. It seems to us that Oct. is no kind of a time in which to shave off a beard that has been growing for several yrs.

NOW AND THEN.

Sick List

The sick list this wk. consists of Miss Samanthly Deever as usual. Bill Hepburn, our artistick blacksmith, had his usual Sunday morning headache after his return from the Co. seat, but aint quite entitled to get placed on the list. Miss Samanthly reports that her condition is satisfactorily low. Some malignant person, says Samanthly, has spread around a rumer that she is a hypochondriack, and she wishes to announce through these columns that she has never took a drug in her life except maybe a littel whiskey when she has a sinking spell, so that the rumer is a vile fabrikashon.
